

SENATE APPROVES TAX CUT CHANGES

Washington, May 5.—(AP)—A proposal, more than two score amendments, was made by the finance committee in the house tax reduction bill, the senate cleared the way today for an early decision on the rate reduction fight.

In the actual work on the bill, the senate literally swept through the long list of committee amendments, putting aside all relating to rates but approving without any debate a number of changes in the administrative provisions.

Enthusiastic over the rapid progress, leaders confidently predicted final action on the bill next week. Both republicans and democrats believe the work of reducing the legislature has served notice they will fight to the finish against the levy.

In its work today, the senate adopted without a word of opposition the proposal to knock off the tax on dividends which would furnish after next year the filing of consolidated returns. The present law was restored with some modifications. Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, charged in the house that Segregates, because it would cause him to pay additional taxes.

Amendment Accepted.

A finance committee amendment also was accepted, providing that thereafter the salary received by the president shall be subject to the income tax. It was explained there was some doubt now as to the availability of this amendment for taxation because of a supreme court ruling.

Chairman Smoot of the committee, in response to Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, announced that a modification of the committee's amendment relating to tax on dividends was under consideration and this subject was passed over. Approval was given, however, to the committee's action in striking from the house bill a provision granting tax exemptions for interest and taxes paid by owners of cooperative apartment buildings.

Senator McMaster, republican, South Dakota, introduced his amendment, giving farmers a rebate of freight rates on agricultural products shipped for export.

Senator Reed, republican, of Pennsylvania, a member of the committee, offered his amendment which would turn over to communities that have gains received by insurance companies from sales of property and securities made subject to taxation.

Brown Thrasher Is Selected As Georgia's 'Official Bird'

Henceforth, when the golden notes of the brown thrasher are heard pouring from the thickets, particular significance will be attached to the song, since selection of the state bird of Georgia, virtually consummated at the recent state gathering, in Decatur, of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, has given new meaning to the choice upon the small brown creature.

The brown thrasher is said to be one of the sweetest song birds of America, and is a permanent resident of Georgia. Besides its natural qualities, it is known to be beneficial to the farmer and crops.

Some time ago the Fifth District of women's clubs asked the Atlanta Bird club to name an appropriate species to be voted upon. After carefully studying the situation, and ascertaining what birds had been selected by other states, the local club offered the name of the brown thrasher, which was quickly adopted to represent Georgia, officials of the Atlanta Bird club explained.

There remains only the official sanction of the Georgia legislature, which is to be requested by the federation of women's clubs and the Atlanta Bird club at the next assembly session, to confer the final honor of Georgia's choice upon the small brown creature.

Thousands of school children throughout Georgia have voted for this bird in competition with other feathered denizens of the air, including deer, song birds of 12 states, and the State Federation of Women's Clubs to vote for the bird receiving a majority in their respective districts. The delegates' choice was unanimously in favor of the brown thrasher, when called for.

There remains only the official sanction of the Georgia legislature, which is to be requested by the Atlanta Bird club at the next assembly session, to confer the final honor of Georgia's choice upon the small brown creature.

TAX ON FORD STOCK
BY U. S. HELD ILLEGAL

1913, the legal basis for computing back taxes to sum, 1919, the date of the sale.

Value of Stock.

The defendants contended that the stock was worth $9,480.34 a share in 1913 as had been fixed by former Commissioner Roper, while Commissioner Blair at the beginning of the reassessment litigation valued the stock at $2.50 a share and later raised it to $3.547.

The board, however, in its opinion today placed the valuation at $10,000 a share or $510 higher than the defendants' claim, than which the defense was not only won their case but it was thought, might be in a position to claim refunds of taxes already paid.

Defense Is Loser.

The board ruled against the defense contention, stressed particularly by counsel for Senator Conzess, of Michigan, that the stock had been held in trust for the case. The commissioner has this right, the board held, "if gross error or error of calculation were discovered."

Counsel for the defense, who has been in close touch with Secretary Mellon, who is in charge of the treasury, charged that the proceedings constituted "persecution" inasmuch as a former commissioner had placed the $9,480.34 valuation on the stock, accepted the tax payments and had finally closed the case.

Value of Stock.

On this pleading the board held that Commissioner Roper's valuation was "a voluntary, gratuitous act, outside the scope of the commissioner's duty."

Such a valuation, the board added, was not binding and by making it the commissioner was liable to a civil suit.

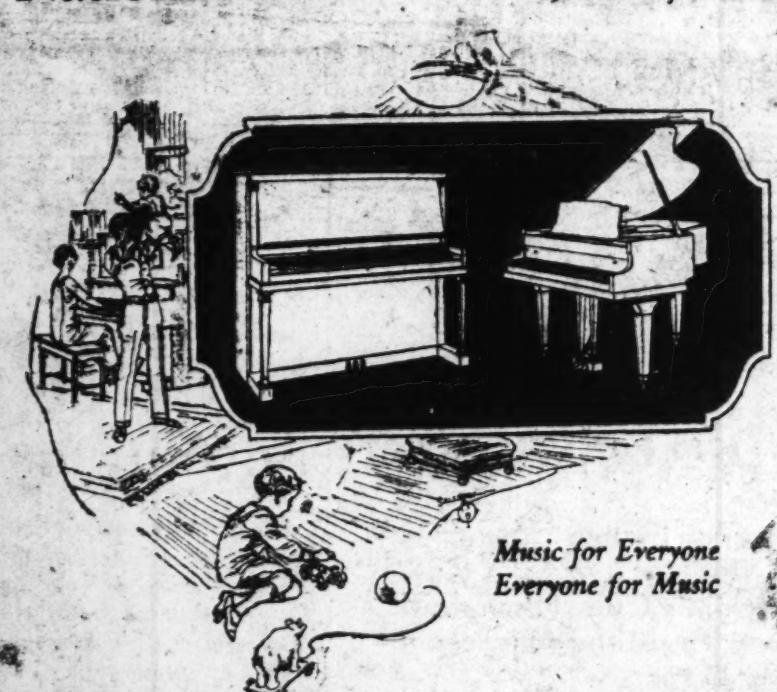

The decision was the longest ever handed down by the tax board, consisting of 219 mimeographed pages. One section in particular, in his opinion Commissioner Roper's, contained of more than a gratuitous, unbinding act and that the board should consider moral and ethical questions.

Geographer Dies.

New York, May 5.—(AP)—Cyrus C. Adams, former president of the American Geographical Society, died at his home in Brooklyn yesterday aged 78. He was born at Naples, Ill., and was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1876.

ROME BOY FINISHES RESEARCH IN FINANCE

Rome, Ga., May 5.—(Special)—William Thomas Cotheran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cotheran, has completed study of research of the laws governing the investment of trust funds in New York, Pennsylvania and Georgia for the research department of the Wharton school of finance and commerce of the University of Pennsylvania.

Young Cotheran is engaged in writing his thesis which is required for graduation from Wharton school, each member of the senior class being obliged to engage in original business research before receiving a diploma.

The average research of the type Cotheran and his class are doing extends over a period of seven months. Cotheran is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity; was graduated from Darlington school, where he was manager of the football team and president of the literary society. He attended University of Georgia his freshman year at college.

Although the board formally passed on the Conzess case, the decision applies to all nine former stockholders.

A rough estimate of the amount of taxes saved by them plus interest, as contained in the pleading, follows:

John E. Dodge estate, $4,337,295; Horace H. Rockham, $4,337,295; Horace Gray, $2,277,979; David Gray, $2,277,979; Philip H. Gray estate, $2,277,979; and Rosetta V. Hauss, $88,404.

The board emphasized in its opinion that the "morals of ethics" of the case were not "within the domain of the obligation of the board" and it made no attempt to pass on this phase of the controversy, which frequently has involved the name of Secretary Mellon, whom Senator Conzess has charged instigated the proceedings in retaliation for his investigation of the bureau of internal revenue.

Statement of Board.

In fixing the value of the stock the board noted:

"Looking at this in the light of all the rights and wrongs of the case, we are of the opinion that the fair market price or value of the stock owned by this petitioner in the Ford Motor company on March 1, 1913, was at the rate of $10,000 a share."

The decision was the longest ever handed down by the tax board, consisting of 219 mimeographed pages. One section in particular, in his opinion Commissioner Roper's, contained of more than a gratuitous, unbinding act and that the board should consider moral and ethical questions.

Wild Scenes in Valley.

The dam, literally a huge mountain thrown across the valley between two jutting ranges, is 700 feet long, 750 feet wide at its base and 150 feet high. Water held back in the reservoir was estimated at 5,000,000,000 gallons. Table Rock mountain towers from one side of the wall while the opposite end is tied into a range of the Caesar's Head mountain. The reservoir site extended to solid rock, but the dam was built with a loose rock base upon which dirt and stones were piled.

There were wild scenes in the Salmon Valley last night when the flood waters were breached. While farm folk fled to their homes, residents of several farms in the valley frantically sought information about the expected wave of water. Many started for the dam site at once, hoping to arrive in time to view the break. At several places where power dams are located across the river, crowds gathered on the bluffs to await the flood. Camp fires were lighted to drive off the chill of the night, while crews of men piled sandbags across the dykes of power plants.

Reports that the dam had broken here caused dynamos at some places to be shut down, while power plant workers sought safety for their machinery.

Flares were lighted along railway embankments, cautioning trains to pass slowly.

Must Rebuild Dam.

The dam, erected at a cost of between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, must be rebuilt regardless of whether it breaks, city officials said today at Greenville. The dam had been accepted by the city as a completed project and the city will bear the loss.

County patrolmen were stationed at various places about the dam and kept the curious crowd back from the dangerous zone.

Fear was felt for low sections of Piedmont, Belton and Ware Shoals and about 250 persons were evacuated from their homes.

Fully 20,000 persons are said to reside in the lower Saluda valley but with ample warnings given, most of them already in the exodus, it was not believed any lives would be lost should the dam break now.

Officers on aid for the evacuated districts redoubled their efforts to get all parts of the country, but the suffering was reported among the refugees and aid had not been requested tonight.

CAROL TO SEIZE RUMANIAN THRONE

had found their way by humble means of transposition to Alba Iulia to-night.

Other meetings of peasants have been scheduled for five cities, but it was still uncertain tonight whether the cabinet would permit a meeting between them.

Thongs arriving at Alba Iulia were said to be unparalleled in the annals of the country. The leader of the peasants is Jilu Manu, who has been fighting the deposed royalist regime. He has repeatedly stated his intention, however, of keeping the peasants from any revolutionary acts, which would lead to bloodshed. He estimated two days ago that at least 250,000 of his followers would attend the congress.

TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM RUMANIAN TOWN.

Alba Iulia, Rumania, May 5.—(AP)—The government today withdrew all troops from the city, so that their presence might not provoke untoward incidents. The city and tonight had concentrated them at five points beyond the outskirts.

The city appeared comparatively calm on the eve of the meeting to-morrow of the national peasant party congress, although its streets were thronged by the countryfolk in their picturesque national costumes.

These continued to stream in to-day, using every known form of vehicle from the two-wheeled carts, gypsies, to automobiles.

The government liberal party during the day had thousands of propaganda tracts dropped from airplanes, exhorting the peasants not to attend the meeting.

BAKERS OF DIXIE CONVENE MONDAY

Elaborate plans are being made for entertainment of the large gathering of bakers who will be delegates for the annual convention of the Southern Bakers' Association. More than 500 southern bakers are scheduled to attend the meeting, according to announcement Saturday by Fred L. House, secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourism bureau.

Headquarters will be at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. The convention will get under way Monday and continue through Wednesday. Previous to the formal opening of the convention, an exhibit of the Southern Bakers' association will be held today at the Biltmore hotel.

Peter R. Nugent, of Savannah, president of the organization, and E. C. Lloyd, of Anniston, Ala., vice president, have been in conference with T. G. Clegg, Atlanta, in arranging the entertainment program.

The program calls for registration throughout Monday with the president's reception and a dance at the Biltmore Monday night.

Tuesday morning the first session opens with Eugene E. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve bank, and Thomas F. Smith, representative of the American Bakers' association, as principal speakers.

Wednesday production problems will be discussed. W. E. Doty, representative of the American Bakers' Bakery Engineers, will speak on "Science of Making of Bread." Other speakers at this session will be John E. Lange, of New York, and Eric Hazel, of Macon, Ga.

The program of Thursday's program will be an address by Leroy E. Rogers, vice president in charge of advertising of the American Bakers' corporation. He will speak on "Bakery Advertising and Dealer Contact." Albert Kloper, editor of Wheat, a weekly of New York, and William J. Barr of Chattanooga, also will speak this session.

Other speakers will be A. Gieffers, of Spartanburg, S. C., and Charles R. Roberts, of Knoxville, Tenn. Election of officers will be held Thursday.

Entertainment features will include a tea for women delegates Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday night there will be a masquerade ball at the Biltmore. Wednesday night on the Biltmore terrace the annual banquet will be served followed by a dance.

VICKERS HEADS SOUTH GA. COMMISSIONERS

Dog Bite Fatal; Railroad Is Sued For Man's Death

Savannah, Ga., May 5.—(AP)—A $50,000 damage suit against the Seaboard Air Line Railroad was filed Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday, May 15, 16 and 17, according to Fred Johnson.

The main feature of the meeting will be seven motorades run into Macon, which will draw the attention of the country.

These motorades will all leave their respective homes on Tuesday morning, May 15.

All delegates are expected to arrive in time for the opening session of the meeting at 10 a. m. on the Bibb county courthouse.

The suit will be heard at the Superior Court of Macon, where the Superior Court of the Fulton county commissioners, Walter B. Stewart, chairman of the Fulton county commissioners, will make an address.

Johnson, switchman on the Seaboard Air Line, was bitten on March 12, 1927, by a dog that had been brought on the engine by a fireman.

The dog was known to be vicious by the fireman, Jimmie Colins, and by one Culpepper, an engineer of the Seaboard Air Line.

Johnson, who was in charge of the condition of said locomotive and charged with the duty of keeping the same in a safe, suitable and proper condition for use.

Johnson protested the progress of the dog, but without effect, it is declared.

On the night that he was bitten, Johnson was throwing a switch when the dog jumped from the engine, ran around and jumped on the switch, biting him in the face.

The animal disappeared and Johnson, uneasy about the bite, had it treated and took hydrophobia serum.

He died on April 19, 1927.

The suit is brought on behalf of Mrs. Johnson and two minor children, a girl, aged 3, and a boy aged 1.

DR. HENRY A. TURNER DIES AT COOSA HOME

Rome, Ga., May 5.—Dr. Henry A. Turner, prominent Rome physician, died Friday at 2:15 a. m. at his country home, near Coosa, from a heart attack. Dr. Turner had a slight attack Tuesday and the second attack, which took his life, came after midnight and he died before a physician reached him.

Dr. Turner received his medical training from the University of Kentucky. He was the son of the late Captain John W. Turner and Miss Virginia, Turner, pioneer citizens of Floyd county. He, with Mrs. Turner, resided at his family home, where he was born and had been reared.

The United States Public Health Service is carrying on research in the heart, most dreaded of diseases, using high frequency oscillating currents on mice in the experiments, and important findings already have been made, Dr. Serougin stated.

Baldwin, Fla., May 5.—(AP)—Pecan growers of several sections of Georgia and Florida will gather at Cairo, Ga., May 29 to attend the twenty-second annual convention of the Georgia-Florida Pecan Growers' association.

The meeting will last for two days.

STOCK-JUDGING TEST CAPTURED BY LANIER

Lakeland, Ga., May 5.—(Special.) The stock-judging team of the Lanier County High school won a remarkable victory today when they defeated the other schools of south Georgia teaching vocational agriculture in the judging of dairy cattle in the contest held at the South Georgia A. & M. college at Tifton, Ga.

This contest was held for the purpose of selecting a team from south Georgia to represent this section of the state in the state-wide elimination contest to be held at Athens in July to determine the team that will represent Georgia at the national dairy show next year.

Five schools were represented at Tifton, each having a team of three boys. The Lanier County High school won first place with a score of 540 points. Ty Ty was second, 504 points, and Sparks-Adel was third, with 498 points.

In addition to winning first place for the team entered, individual scoring honors were captured by the Lanier County High school when a senior and a junior each scored with a total of 205 points. The winning team was coached by Professor A. P. Lewis, vocational training teacher of Lakeland, who ranks as one of the most efficient teachers in the state. Members of the winning team are: Richard Smith, Brooker Fountain and Leonard Fountain. It is the consensus of opinion that these boys will be hard to beat in the final contest.

Fair and Cool Weather Seen For Week-End

Atlanta will have fine weather for the next few days.

This encouraging statement, made Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, was explained by the weather bureau in this wise: "Fair weather is expected Sunday with cooler temperatures. The chances are excellent for several more days of fair weather."

Mostly fair weather during this week promises with wind up the latter part of the seven-day period with light showers, according to the weather bureau's weekly forecast. Cool weather is expected today and Monday, followed by normal temperatures for a day or two, and then by above normal temperatures.

Today's temperatures will range between 55 and 78 degrees, as compared with Saturday's readings of 62 and 80 degrees. The weather bureau said the coolness and fair weather will be brought about by high pressure areas west of the Mississippi, and a storm over the St. Lawrence valley. Moderate westerly winds are expected today.

Crew of Bremen Dedicates Money To Air Conquest

New York, May 5.—(AP)—Offered the first material reward for their next flight, the German-Irish crew of the Bremen have dedicated its use to the promotion of aviation.

Baron von Huenfeld, speaking for himself and his two companions, accepted a check for $12,500 from the Electrolux company of Sweden, offered for the first flight from America and then given to Miss Herta Junkers as the representative of her father, Professor Hugo Junkers, builder of the Bremen, to be used for "further experimentation and research in aviation."

The board's action, taken at the dinner given the flyers by the donors of the prize, came as a surprise and brought the representatives of 30 nations assembled to their feet cheering.

Professor Junkers had previously been offered the prize by the donors as the conditions of the award said it was for the builder of the plane but had refused it, saying it should go to the flyers themselves. His daughter said she hoped her father would accept it. Professor Junkers is to arrive here Monday.

At an advertising club luncheon Captain Koehl said that when he and Baron von Huenfeld flew from Germany to Ireland they had not definitely selected the third man for the flight.

"As soon as we landed at Baldonnel, Ireland, and a man in the uniform of the Irish Free State stepped forward to greet us, I knew he was the man we wanted," said Koehl. "I could tell by the glint in his eye."

Captain Koehl said he would give his "last drop of blood to work for peace and humanity."

AVIATORS KILLED IN LAKE PLUNGE ARE IDENTIFIED

Buffalo, N. Y., May 5.—(AP)—The two aviators who plunged to death in a plane off Longpoint, Ont., in Lake Erie yesterday were identified tonight as James M. Lapey, young Buffalo insurance man, and O. Rosecrans, a Milwaukee flier and student at Harvard law school.

A hat found floating on the lake after the plane struck the water and exploded was definitely established as that worn by Rosecrans. A chart which was salvaged out of the wreckage, showing the air route from Milwaukee to Boston, corresponded with the one Rosecrans is known to have had in his plane.

"As the day wore on and there was no word from the two men who had started out yesterday to fly from Cleveland to Buffalo, it became only too evident that they were the victims of this fatal plane crash."

"There is no doubt about it, My son is at the bottom of Lake Erie," Percy G. Lapey said tonight. "It is a sad ending to a promising career."

BROTHER OF BALL STAR SUCCUMBS TO POISON

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 5.—(AP)—W. C. Wilson, who claimed to be a brother of Hack Wilson, the Chicago Cub, died of poison at the home of his wife's parents near Cleveland, Tenn., yesterday. Wilson, an aviator, is said to have had a broken neck as the result of a mine accident in Ohio some time ago. He came to Tennessee from Lexington, Ky., last fall. It is said his wife recently left Cleveland and went to Wyoming.

Kellogg Commended.

Washington, May 5.—The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom today adopted a resolution commanding Secretary Kellogg for his peace treaty activities and went on record as favoring the Burton resolution proposing that shipment of arms and ammunition to nations at war be forbidden.

CHARGES HURLED IN INDIANA RACE

Indianapolis, Ind., May 5.—(AP)—Out of the mark of political corruption charges alleged Klan control and exertion of economic influence of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, Hoover voters at next Tuesday's primary will give their decision after one of the hottest campaigns Indiana has known in years. The eyes of the nation will turn to the race between Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and United States Senator James E. Watson for the republican presidential preference vote.

Both Hoover and Hoover forces today predicted victory.

Evans Woolen, Indianapolis banker, is unopposed for the presidential preference on the democratic ballot.

Opposed to Klan.

United States Senator Arthur Robinson, seeking renomination on the republican ticket, has as opponents Attorney General Arthur L. Gilloom and Selen J. Carter, Indianapolis attorney. Gilloom has opposed the Ku Klux Klan and has fought the Anti-Saloon league equally as hard.

Carroll C. Stump, Indianapolis attorney, attacked his opponent Robinson for his alleged connection with the Klan; and Gilloom for alleged failure while assisting the Marion county grand jury in its political corruption investigation to bring about an earlier indictment of Governor Ed Jackson.

Three Attorneys Run.

Three Indianapolis attorneys are contesting for the democratic senatorial nomination. They are Walter Myers, outspoken fan of the Klan; Albert Stump, who gave Senator Watson a run in the last general election, and L. William Curry, an advocate of light wines and beers. Myers has charged Stump with having Klan supporters.

It is possible that no senatorial election in either party will receive a majority vote. In that event nominees will be selected in state conventions.

It has been around the gubernatorial fight that much of the political corruption talk has centered. Ten republicans and seven democrats are contesting for the favor of their party at the primary. These nominations likewise may have to go to the conventions.

HULL ENDORSED BY TENNESSEE COUNTY.

Memphis, May 5.—(AP)—The Shelby county democratic convention today endorsed Cordell Hull's candidacy for the presidential nomination and Senator Kenneth McKellar for reelection.

WOMAN ADMITS GIVING HUSBAND POISONED CANDY

Mountain View, Ark., May 5.—(AP)—A confession by Mrs. Harrison Prince, mother of four children, that she and a man with whom she was then living, Harry Stewart, 45, after the death of the woman's husband and made three unsuccessful attempts to end his life with poison, was in the hands of officers here today, they announced.

Mrs. Prince was at liberty under $1,000 bond and Stewart was held in jail in default of bond, both charged with assault with intent to kill. Prince is seriously ill from the effects, physicians say, of a dose of poison.

The confession of Mrs. Prince relates, officers said, that she first placed poison in Prince's coffee. This, however, did not affect him, whereupon the criminal, Stewart, said he told her she had used too much poison, she was quoted as saying. She then gave him poison in candy twice, they announced.

Prince became ill about three weeks ago and physicians diagnosed the cause as poison.

An investigation was started and indictment of the pair followed.

George Barrere's Little Symphony To Play at Auditorium Friday Night

George Barrere (standing) and his world-famous Little Symphony, which will be heard Friday night at the auditorium.

The Atlanta Music club will present the Barrere little symphony at 8:30 o'clock, Friday night, May 11, at the Auditorium-Armory. This is the last concert of the "civic series" and is given in observance of national music week.

After this young George joined a music teacher here he studied in the flute, and he became a flute pupil of the Paris conservatoire and induced Barrere to take up the study seriously. He studied under Henry Altes and then under Paul Taffanel.

"In the little symphony Mr. Barrere has gathered around him musicians of the first rank. The ensemble consists of the choir of wind instruments, the flute, oboe, bassoon, trumpet and bassoon—combined with an adequate balance of the string section. The program in Atlanta will be to be varied with. When he was a little boy at school he taught his classes during recess to an admiring group of youngsters. The toy shop of the little town of Eperton in France could not supply these vehicles of virtuosity quickly enough to answer the calls.

INDIANA PRIMARY HOLDS G.O.P. EYES of limitations and the indictment of Indiana's attorney general, of the state, the city of Indianapolis, or the republican party organization.

Hoover Is Strong.

In addition to these reasons why Indiana might turn down Watson and go for Hoover, there is, of course, the fact that Hoover has, as his own and also the apparent fact, suggested by the primaries in Ohio and elsewhere, that a country-wide tide is running in favor of Hoover. Against all this, however, stands the machine, by far the best-disciplined, state-wide machine now existing in America, and not inferior to the Tammany city machine in New York.

If Hoover should win in Indiana, the G.O.P. group will pick up its fight in the country at large. They considered giving up after Hoover's sensational victory in Ohio. If Hoover loses in Indiana, the G.O.P. leaders will get on with their program.

They will try to hold Hoover just short of a majority through the early ballots, precipitate what they will describe as an emergency, make a general call for a special session, and upon his refusal, take advantage of the ensuing chaos to name a "dark horse." It should be added that there are several impediments to this program, including the probability that Coolidge will forward it and take timely action to prevent the use of his name as part of it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNEX WILL BE DEDICATED

Dr. William Howard Faust, pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church, will end a two weeks' revival meeting with two sermons today. One will be delivered at the 11 o'clock service this morning and the other at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

A feature of the closing of the meeting will be the dedication of the new Sunday school annex, constructed under supervision of J. Newt Landers, pastor of the church, who also directed the church, who also directed construction of the church itself and who is the sole surviving male member of the charter membership of the institution.

Services will be held in the church during the services, and 25 were baptized in a special service Friday night. Others will be indoctrinated into the congregation at a special baptismal service following the prayer meeting Wednesday night.

While Dr. Faust opened and will close the services, Dr. John E. White, of the First Baptist church, Savannah, and Dr. Walter P. Bishop, LaGrange, have occupied the pulpits during the meetings, and the musical programs have been directed by Fred Barnes, leading chorister and soloist of the Southern Baptist convention. Mrs. Arthur McCrae has presided at the piano.

Mr. Landers will be one of the honored members of the congregation today, with the cartoon of his son, the popular schoolboy, as the new names. He has worked tirelessly through many discouragements for consummation of his dream of a big church, Dr. Faust said.

That dream will be realized today. The new church has cost more than $75,000. It is constructed of solid Stone Mountain granite, and is one of the most beautiful buildings of its kind in the city.

Mr. Landers has been pastor of the congregation for the past five years, and during his ministry it has grown from a modest number to more than 1,000.

EDUCATION BOARD TO ELECT SCHOOL OFFICERS TUESDAY

Elections of assistant superintendents of the Atlanta educational system will feature the regular meeting of the board of education Tuesday, it was announced Saturday.

No opposition is expected to develop, according to leaders of the board.

Raymond R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent in charge of secondary school affairs; H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent in charge of high and junior high schools, and Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary schools, will be up for reelection.

They will be reelected in nomination by W. H. Sutton, who was reelected for a three-year term at the last regular meeting of the board.

Other routine matters will be considered, it was announced by George Powell, president.

Eight of the nine members of the Century club of local post "B," Travelers' Protective Association, are shown in the above picture. They and a delegation of more than 50 others will leave Atlanta Wednesday to attend the state convention to be held Thursday and Friday at Savannah. From left to right, those seated are: E. D. McDonald, J. H. Andrews, W. P. Price and J. C. Harrison, former president and director of a recent drive for new members. Standing are F. E. Kibler, Carter C. Harrison, secretary of the post; J. H. Owen and W. W. Moore, director of publicity of the organization. The club is composed of members who added 100 new members each to the roll of the post during the year. Ab. L. Smith, another member of the club, is not in the picture.

Three-score representatives of local post "B," Travelers' Protective Association, will leave Atlanta Wednesday to attend the annual state convention of the organization in Savannah, Thursday and Friday.

Nine members of the "Century club," an organization composed of members who have added 100 names each to the roll of the post during the fiscal year, also will attend the meeting in Georgia and will be the largest contingent.

The Atlanta post, headed by J. H. Owen, president, will form a caravan of automobiles and proceed to the convention Wednesday morning. The delegates expect to reach their destination about noon.

The post has more than 2,300 members, including those annexed during the recent membership drive, which was directed by Major J. C. Harrison, former president.

NEW ATTRACTIONS AT LOCAL PARKS

When Atlanta's municipal recreational system is formally opened to the public June 2, many innovations will be placed at the disposal of patrons and the 30 playgrounds and six swimming pools will be in better condition than ever before.

This was the joint statement issued Saturday by John A. White, councilman of the fourth ward and chairman of the parks committee of city council, and L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds.

The entire winter and especially the spring months have been spent in vigorous work for the play season, and the aim of the department this year will be to have 250,000 patrons at the parks and playgrounds during the season. Last year the total was 180,000.

Playrooms To Be Ready.

There are 27 white play centers and three for negroes. The whites will have five swimming pools and the negroes one. A feature of the work of the department in preparing for the play season is the new swimming pool and the bathhouse at Mozley park.

Realization of the aim for a year-round play center is contained in the new bathhouse, which can be used as a dance floor, for a motor court, for tennis, indoor baseball and other indoor sports during the winter weather.

In the summer time it can be converted to other uses and thus be a year-round asset to the recreational system.

Every youngster in Atlanta, and grown-ups too, Saturday were invited to utilize parks concessions free of any cost on Saturday, June 2, the opening day. No charge will be made for any private concession, such as the cyclorama, golf courses, tennis courts, the cyclorama and all other entertainment and recreation concessions will be entered without any cost to patrons. Mr. White said: "This has been the custom for several years."

Bathing Suits.

Bathers will be permitted to run the gamut of styles of bathing suits. The only restriction which the department has issued is that the bathers be dressed in a manner that is decent.

Bathing pools for white persons will be at Piedmont, Grant, Oakland City, Madiox and Mozley parks, and for negroes at Washington park.

Thirty Shelters will be placed at Piedmont and Grant parks for the use of the children this year. Mayor L. N. Ragsdale and park department officials initiated the sport last season and the ponies proved so popular that the demand was almost unanimous among the youngsters that they again be placed at disposal of the children this year.

Mr. Ragsdale, Mr. White and Mr. Wallis have given their promise, and are planning to make purchases within the next few weeks.

An entirely new color scheme will greet the public when they visit the parks this season. All equipment has been painted green, and gives the impression of a new park.

Golf courses at Grant and Piedmont already are in operation, and another nine-hole course at Candler park will be ready by July 1, it was announced.

The 18-hole courses at the John A. White course, Cascade avenue in West End, and the Bobby Jones course at the Peachtree Creek Memorial park will be ready for the public by July 1, Mr. White predicted.

Fulton county commissioners are assisting in the grading necessary, and will begin work at once. The courses and the 18-hole course at the I. N. Bagdad park in the Capitol View section of the city were laid out by Stiles and Van Kleek, internationally known golf experts of Boston.

A merry-go-round will be placed on each of the 30 parks in the entire system, and the parkulars are assisted by the pre-season rush of youngsters to use them.

A corps of efficient playground directors will be given an intensive course lasting about a week prior to actual opening of the new season. Mr. White said, and every facility which the city can place at the disposal of Atlanta for recreational purposes will be offered.

We are pleased with the progress of the work, and have been as liberal with new equipment as our budget possibly would allow," Mr. White said. "We hope to make the 1923 playground and recreational season in Atlanta the greatest in the history of the city."

BIGGEST BUILDING IN ALL THE WORLD IS CHICAGO PLAN

Chicago, May 5.—Plans for Chicago's newest commercial building to be more than twice as large as any other in the world, were announced today. The structure, which will contain more than 94 acres of floor space, will be known as the merchandise mart. Half of its space will be devoted to the wholesale and manufacturing sales department of Marshall Field and company.

The project will be the world's largest, since the development of air rights as the property of the new building, except for caissons, begins 23 feet above ground.

Workers in the Chicago and North-Western railroad will occupy the space beneath the building. In that space will be operated incoming and outgoing freight stations, connected with express elevators which will whisk merchandise to the hundreds of companies that will occupy the 18 upper stories.

Above these 18 stories will rise a tower five stories in height which will contain the members' club, an establishment for the convenience of merchandise traders.

The estimated cost of the mart is $30,000,000 and a corporation is now being formed to own and operate it.

U. S. CONSUL TELLS STATE ENDS CASE STORY OF TSINAN AT KNAPP TRIAL

Washington, May 5.—(AP)—The story of what happened at Tsinan was received today by the state department from Ernest B. Price, American consul there, in a dispatch dated May 4, at 11 a. m.

On the morning of May 3, at about 10 o'clock, there occurred a clash between Japanese and nationalist troops the precise cause of which is as yet unknown." Mr. Price said.

"General Tooska from both sides then started the Japanese to pull out armed carts and detachments to clear the settlement of southern troops. In the course of the fighting, which continued with considerable intensity until 6 p. m. and intermittently all night, it is understood that the Japanese employed field artillery with which the Chinese wireless station was destroyed."

"Both sides suffered casualties, the precise extent of which is believed to be heavy."

"Both sides, according to the diplomats, every effort to persuade both sides to cease firing but each side claimed that while strict orders had been issued to that effect, the other side continued firing. The Japanese appear to be that unit from both sides had been isolated and that orders could not be gotten through but eventually, apparently, the Chinese troops were withdrawn from the foreign settlements which, it is understood, is now clear or realistic."

"Negotiations between representatives of Chiang Kai Shek, who is now here, and the Japanese commander-in-chief, took place last night, the principal result of which was apparently that the nationalist troops should be withdrawn twenty li beyond the border of the settlement."

"The American, British and French consulates have been requested by the chamber of commerce and other Chinese officials to attempt to persuade both sides to cease actual firing endangering lives and property of our nationals. We can assist in suggesting good channels of escape in the request of both sides and under specific instructions of our government."

"All American lives and property are believed to be safe. Representatives of General Chiang came to the consulate last night to offer us the conduct to the nationalist headquarters, which I declined. They then offered a special police guard for the consulate, which I accepted."

"General Tooska requests that the German minister be informed that all Germans are safe, but that the nationalist troops looted the Stein hotel."

"American consul Edwin S. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, today informed the state department that the local commissioners of foreign affairs, Huang Fu, now at Tsinan, informed him that the American consul and all American nationalists at Tsinan were safe. As far as we know, that American citizens were killed and will be given full protection by the nationalist military authorities at Tsinan."

The American forces in China are somewhat scattered, the largest proportion being at Tientsin, about 80 miles from Peking. At that place there are about 3,000 marines of the fifteenth infantry and detachments of the tenth signal corps company and some ordnance companies. These forces are to keep open communications between Peking and the coast.

Albany, N. Y., May 5.—(AP)—All of the information available indicated that the state hoped to prove a charge of grand larceny in connection with alleged misuse of a $2,875.00 state census pay check for $2,875.00 against Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former secretary of state.

Ten minutes of defense argument was given by the state, and the journal of the special term of supreme court was taken until Monday morning.

Three of Mrs. Knapp's relatives testified today on behalf of the state census pay checks, which they are supposed by the prosecution never to have seen, or the proceeds of which are alleged to have gone to others, presumably Mrs. Knapp. They were the mother of the widow, Helen Smith, who testified from his sick bed, a sister, Julia Abigail Smith, and Mr. Smith's wife, Helen B. Smith, all of New Bedford, Mass.

They said that he and she had given the money to the state census authority to use, and that when he died a widow, Helen Smith, who had been a life member, Rev. H. P. Langlois officiated.

The pallbearers, brothers-in-law and nephews, were Rev. Lytel Jones of the First Methodist church at Climax, where she had been a life member, Rev. H. P. Langlois officiated.

of supporting troops to Shantung province, China, where Japanese soldiers are facing a nationalist army.

It was thought probable the Nagoya division would be sent.

Latest reports from Tsinan are that 10 Japanese soldiers were killed and 33 wounded in fighting at Tsinan.

Serious fighting is believed to have ceased for the moment.

Civilian casualties at Tsinan are unknown. Several Japanese women are declared to have been assaulted and murdered.

Official Japanese reports are that the fighting followed several days of provocation by undisciplined national troops.

On Sunday, it is declared, rioters raided the home of a Japanese lumberman. On Monday further raids were conducted, it is said. On Wednesday, the reports say, Chinese fired on Japanese guards. The guards replied, and the fighting began.

BROKEN RAILROAD

Intangao, China, May 5.—(AP)—The cablegram received by the representatives of the Chinese nationalist government in the United States from Kwang-fu, its minister of foreign affairs, protests Japanese hostilities at Tsinan, Shantung province, and terms the fighting unprovoked and premeditated.

The cablegram charges the Japanese made a number of attacks against Chinese citizens and soldiers, using machine guns and their heavy artillery with great destruction of life and property.

The nationalists endured numberless insults from the Japanese, it is said further, and is directed chiefly at the president of the Tientsin commission of foreign affairs, Tuan-Kung-Han, who had his ears and nose cut off by Japanese soldiers.

Chicago, May 5.—(Special)—The general conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church opens here in the eighth regiment armory Monday.

Bishop H. Blanton Parks, senior bishop of the church, will preside over the assembly.

Bishop John A. Gregg, of South Africa and W. Sampson Brooks, presiding bishop of West Africa, with presidents, deacons and foreign delegates have arrived which has given caste to a world Methodist.

Georgia, the largest Episcopal district of the denomination, has its leaders present to push the church's program of missions, planning for a wide service in missionary, educational and evangelistic drives in the coming quadrennium.

Dr. J. L. Stringer, Dr. I. G. Glass, Dr. T. Wilderson, E. Reese, Dr. W. L. Stark, Dr. E. S. Hause, Dr. M. A. P. Sherman, Dr. S. L. Sison are the leaders of Georgia and are members of the Episcopal committee in that they examine the physical condition of and pass upon the religious life of the bishops.

Dr. R. V. Branch, Dr. J. Lindsey, Dr. R. E. R. Sims, H. D. Canady, G. W. Alexander, of Georgia, and Dr. R. W. Warden, the floor debater, are being pushed by their friends for the bishipric.

Dr. R. J. Jefferson and M. A. Franklin, secretaries in Georgia's lineup are on the job looking after that which concerns Georgia.

GOVERNOR URGES SUPPORT TO D. A. V.

countless thousands of our disabled men.

Whereas, the United States government is constantly striving toward this end, although it cannot act as judge, jury and attorney for the disabled man, who has not access to his own way, record except through his legal officers.

Whereas, there is now in progress in Atlanta and the state of Georgia a campaign for funds for the establishment of the liaison service fostered by the D. A. V. and under the command of our own Georgia's greatest citizen, our own Bobby Jones, and

Whereas, the sum that is asked will be expended on our own disabled men and in securing their just compensation for disability resulting from

Whereas, it is the duty of Georgia's citizenry to aid in the rehabilitation program in giving the disabled man another chance at health and happiness.

Therefore, I, L. G. Hardman, governor of the state of Georgia, do hereby urge the citizens of Atlanta and the people throughout our state to lend their support to this laudable undertaking in behalf of the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

"Given under my hand and seal of the executive department, this May 2, 1928.

(Signed) L. G. HARDMAN,
"Governor of Georgia."

The Lost Legion.

Maude Street, New York, is the author of a poem, "The Lost Legion," which members of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War say pictures so well the spirit of the inactive, the following:

In distant lands we fallen lie,
Lost legions beneath an alien sky;

But friendly hosts with reverent tread.

Keep faithful watch above our dead.
In Flanders fields they watch and we

Where safe with God our heroes sleep.

Day after day, year after year,
Naught will those sleeping have to fear.

For France stands guard and vigil keeps.

O'er him in Flanders' fields who sleeps,

Naught will she leave undone that
Can do for those Left in her care.

In prison walls the wounded lie,
Lost legions harried from native sky;

But gallant hosts with careless tread.

Pass gaily by our living dead.

Sad dervishes of war and fate,

They plead for help that, soon or late,

Much reach inside each padded cell.

And love each victim back from

Let us break faith with these, our own.

And reap the whirlwind war has.

Naught must we leave undone that we Can do for these Left in our care.

Naught must we leave undone, but share.

Our all with those Left in our care."

TWO BURNED PLANTS WILL BE BUILT

called out. Weak water pressure was said to have hampered the fire fighters.

The Whitehall and Stewart Avenue section is served only by six-inch water mains and these are so old and corroded the stream is considerably reduced, Mr. Morrison said. The danger from fire because of low pressure has been pointed out several times but nothing has been done toward putting in larger mains, he declared.

Mr. Morrison said that the Dibro plant had to shut down several times because sufficient water to fill the boilers could not be obtained. The pressure Friday night was not enough to throw a stream of water a distance of 100 feet, he said.

Temporary Offices Opened.

Temporary offices have been taken by the Dibro plant in a house across Whitehall street from the ruined mill. Emergency telephone and light service has been installed, and the company Saturday began to carry on its business again. Mr. Morrison said the company will build a temporary office on the site of the old one, and probably will rebuild its plant on the site of the ruined mill, and in addition may build a branch plant on the north side.

Several cars, trucks and a passenger coupe were burned in the fire. The coupe was left at the plant by R. C. Roberts, a lumber salesman, who usually took the car home. Five rail cars, one loaded with newly arrived logs, and one loaded with twisted and distorted masses of steel and ashes Saturday morning. All of the cars were loaded with lumber at the time of the fire.

Practically every bit of the lumber mill machinery was ruined, the steel and iron being twisted, and broken by the flames. Prompt work by the fire department saved a good deal of lumber, and the remains of the yard, and also one of the warehouse sheds. The shed saved, however, was the smallest in the yard. Rapid spreading of the fire was due to the fact that a great deal of the timber was stacked with air spaces between the boards so as to dry.

The entire section around Whitehill and Stewart avenue, devoted mainly to wholesalers and manufacturers, was endangered by the fire. The origin of the blaze remained undetermined Saturday, although the opinion was expressed that sparks from a passing locomotive might have been responsible, as small fires along the right of way have been discovered in grass and trash a number of times between the boards so as to dry.

Mr. Randall reports that the company is meeting with splendid success and now has bottlers representing it in 17 states.

ward, W. Garland Cooper, incumbent, and Solomon Johnson; for council, eleventh ward, W. R. Johnson, incumbent; for council, twelfth ward, William E. Sanders, incumbent, and Thomas W. Jones; for the board of education, first ward, J. H. Landers, incumbent; for education board, second ward, William C. Slatte; for education board, third ward, W. W. Gaines, incumbent, and for education board, fourth ward, J. Ira Haralson and H. M. Morris.

Only the above listed positions are to be sought in the primary this year. All other elective city officials will hold their positions until succeeding primaries are held.

YORK'S Announcement.

Pertaining to a long list of constructive achievements which he sponsored during his three terms as a member of general council, Councilman Harry York, of the sixth ward, issued a formal announcement in which he outlined reasons why citizens of the sixth ward should return him for another term.

He is one of the most influential members of general council and is regarded as a floor leader of the progressive element. He has served on practically every important committee of city council including finance, streets, police, sewers, parks, traffic, bridge, charter revision and ordinance.

He was the first chairman of the parks committee when they were established, and he maintained control and directed organization of the system for the city.

Some of his constructive work has been in street paving and widening as chairman of the traffic committee of city council.

He assisted in sponsoring widening and paving of West Peachtree, Forrest avenue, Luckie street, from Bartow to North avenue, which forms a connecting link between the center of the city and Northside drive; Peachtree drive, from Cain to North avenue, and Courtland street, from Edgewood to Forrest.

He also assisted in pushing through paving work for Marietta street, Five Points, Edgewood avenue, East Northside, and in paving Cain, Harris, Pine, Mills, Harden Alexander, Bartow, Fairlie, Poplar and Williams streets and in addition RADIO-ING² The Air Waves!

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

Short wave broadcasting has come into its own. From 10 meters to 108 meters, two dozen and more stations have been licensed by the federal radio commission to go on the air. From the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard, these stations are pioneering the highest frequencies ever used for wireless telephony.

Not only are stations on the air and more being licensed for the several short wave bands, but tests being made are proving of utmost importance to the future of radio transmission and reception. Trans-Atlantic and continental-to-continental tests are being carried out on schedules.

With the necessity freely expressed, of cutting anywhere from 150 to 400 stations operating on the present broadcast band from 200 to 545 meters off the air, the short waves are being used to a marked degree as a means of accelerating broadcast stations, as well as the commercial value of these high frequencies.

The Associated Press has compiled a list of more than two dozen stations which have been licensed for short wave broadcasting. The following:

KDKA, Pittsburgh, 100-150; WURL, Winter Park, Fla., up to 200; WOVO, Ft. Wayne, 228; WRLN, New York, 30.81; KFQJ, Alameda, Calif., 31.53.63. 106.6; KJL, San Francisco, 32. WJRL, 32. WVG, Schenectady, 32.7; WLW, Cincinnati, Ohio, 52.03; WUGU, Coney Island, N. Y., 54.02; WEAO, Columbus, Ohio, 54.02; WAIC, Richmond Hill, N. Y., 58.5; WAFB, New Orleans, 59.01; KFAC, Biltmore, 60.01; KJL, Newark, N. J., 63.18; WHK, Cleveland, Ohio, 66.04; KHL, Los Angeles, 104.1; KFVD, Venice, Calif., 105; WBRL, Tulsa, Okla., 105.100; KJR, Seattle, Wash., 105.2; KERI, Portland, 105.9; KEPY, Spokane, 105.9; KXN, Los Angeles, 107.1; KFWH, Eureka, Calif., 108.2; KFQZ, Los Angeles, 108.2.

Experiments with the short wave transmitter of 5SW at Chelmsford, England, will be maintained at least the next few months," according to a letter from H. Jeffree Cooper, chief engineer of the Associated Press.

Mr. Cooper's letter said:

"The object of the present experiments is to explore channels which might possibly lead to a system of regular programs overseas. Up to the present it is apparent that the future of a series of short wave stations depend more upon a solution of the problem of good reception than upon changes at the transmitting end. For such service to be of real benefit it must be maintained unbroken and free from atmospheric variations and other interruptions to enable it to be rebroadcast with a quality comparable with that of the local station's output."

The signals from 5SW have recently been more distinct than six weeks ago. The carrier wave comes in on short wave receivers with a "screach" comparable to the signal of WGY at Schenectady, which is deteriorating.

Judge Eugene O. Sykes, representative of the southern states, has been studying the radio commission's records for two weeks studying the radio situation in his territory. He is conferring with applicants for broadcasting licenses as well as station owners and licensees.

Commissioner Harold Lafount of the far west zone recently returned from an inspection trip in Utah and Colorado.

AGED FILM FLAM GAME IS BALKED BY TWO OFFICERS

A little negro from Buhmin ham arrived in town Saturday.

Two big negroes from way down on Decatur street met him at the station and greeted him effusively, so much so in fact, that the little negro didn't mind a bit because he was the son of his larger brethren before him.

Arm in arm, the trio walked out of the terminal station, and suddenly one of the big negroes stooped and picked up a pocketbook which contained a sum of money which the negro could jump over. The "finder" of the pocketbook suggested that the little negro get his good money changed and the trio could equally divide the sum of finds.

The Motorcycle Officers Herman Clay and Dr. L. Barge stepped up and placed John Dozier and LeRoy Baker, under arrest on charges of suspicion in connection with the alleged attempt to film-flam the little negro from Buhmin ham.

Georgia Tech Trims Vanderbilt; Bulldogs Defeat Vols

Vandy Bows To Jackets In Last, 10-8

Tech Sluggers Have Big Day; Florrid and Jordan Hurl.

Coach "Kid" Clay's Georgia Tech baseball nine made it two straight over the fast Vanderbilt university diamond stars on Clay field Saturday afternoon. The score was 10-8.

Georgia Tech got away to a three-run lead in the initial frame, after bunching hits off Hawkins of Vandy. They added a couple more in the succeeding inning. The Vandy bats began to work in the third frame and they were not silenced until three Tennesseeans had romped across the ninth, and the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech, in the fourth inning, they scored another run, to come within one score of tying the count. During the next three innings the Jackets showed across five runs to cinch the game.

When the Vandy crew came to bat in the eighth inning they were five runs behind. At this time they started a rally which netted them three runs. They were held scoreless in the ninth, and the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech, in the fourth inning, they scored another run, to come within one score of tying the count. During the next three innings the Jackets showed across five runs to cinch the game.

Waddy was the most consistent hitter for Tech, annexing three safeties out of four times at bat. Parham poled out a long triple, and Brown of Vandy, a single. Both Tech and Vandy had two hits for doubles for the Tech cause. Brooks of Vandy hit for two doubles, while Hawkins got one.

Both teams hit consistently throughout the game. A total of 29 binges was chalked up, Tech getting 15 and Vandy 14.

THIS SPORTS RACKET
By Ben Cothran

Last Sunday morning, upon perusing the average baseball games of the preceding Thursday, one noticed that the local nine was floundering along with the hamboyan bargain price, having average of .233, which, if you ever expect to accomplish anything, isn't much of a team to make.

It is morning if you turn over the averages and take a slant at the team, battoning you'll find Memphis leading with .313, Birmingham with .310 and the Crackers bouncing along with a percentage of .309.

A percentage of .300 against one of .233 a week ago, loss by the bushels, trading in Wall street or the past few days may something to do with it.

But we suspect that the home side's making .010 in the Thru-the-Weeks—this doesn't include hits of yesterday and Friday—had a great deal to do with it.

That averages over 11 hits per game. And, unless the club is playing Memphis, it is, are usually enough to win any game that this past week.

But taking the week which began on Monday last and closed yesterday afternoon with old man Tom Rogers checking the Crackers, the Crackers work all right, it is evident, according to the records. They have 86 hits made during this offensive period. That averages 14 and one-third hits per game.

From which it isn't hard to imagine that some bright person has used the "pulmometer" on "murderer's row" after all were of the belief that this same "row" had been taken out and hung.

For the team, while out on the road, wasn't hitting the size of the w. k. hat. The boys came back and did their work yesterday afternoon with old man Tom Niedhoff changed his batting order, put Max West in the lead, zipped Johnny Jones up from seventh to second position, shot Rhiel into clean-up and dropped Frankie Zouell down to sixth place. Even old Sam Rutherford, a round head, at the deli, hardly recognized the bunch. But the combination worked, effectively.

West came out of a batting slump and has been climbing steadily since he came through nobly and is at present leading the entire bunch at .300.

Jim Poole and Paul Strand, two old "muds, are beginning to find the range. This gives cause to believe that Southern association pitchers are coming in a little trouble.

Flu, which ruined the club on the road, has just about stamped out, so Bill Daley, crack-trainer, reports. You might just as well part with the team as the sudden rise in stock of the club and not be misgiving. All aches and pains are reported to be round Mr. Daley and he is usually rather adept at getting rid of them. He keeps giving armchair diagnosis, but fixed up Bill Riehl in such a manner that Bill was able to keep playing, despite a pulled tendon.

Anyhow, Bill says that the boys are about getting over this epidemic of flu which struck them about the beginning of the last month.

"Flu" remarked Bill, "it has to get over. You might be up, moving around, and all that, but it's still got you. Flu causes you to lose weight and strength and it takes a week or maybe two to recover so that you're again at top form."

"Walter Gilbert should have been pbed more than half that road trip, but the only way you could have gotten him there was knock him in the head. He was just about out of it and was the second man out of it of those fumbles at third base."

"But he's about recovered his strength now. So has Jim Poole. The entire squad is in good shape and is back in shape, that way."

That's from the Crackers' trainer. So if getting back into shape has caused the gang to hit like it has

Tech Swimmers Are Winners in First State Meet Here

R. Hollerman Nears Record In His Event

Jacket Stars Take Five First Places at A. A. C.

BY WHITNER CARY.

See in the same dazzling pace that has carried him to two national championships in as many years, the crack swimming team of Tech showed the way in decisive fashion to the aquatic stars of Georgia and Emory Saturday night at the Atlanta Athletic club, the site of the Georgia state swimming meet.

The swimmers took five first places out of a possible seven and ran up a total of 41 points. Georgia was second with 20 and Emory third with 5.

Red Hollerman, the fast, strapping water cleaver who holds the southern record in the 220 free style, came within three-fifths of a second of equalling his top mark when he neared the distance in 2:28.34. He was using a powerful open stroke in splendid fashion and outdistanced the rest of the bunch by a wide margin that it was a runaway after the first 50 yards. This star also did good work in the relay, the closing on the card.

Georgia Wins Dives

McKinstry, of Tech, topped the 100-yard free style. Haggerty, of the Tech swimmers, who also won the 100-yard back stroke and B. Harris added glory to the jacket forces by taking the 100-yard breast stroke. Georgia won the fancy diving contest by a margin of 5.3 points when Hodson was the only one to score.

Sam Gray, of the Browns, and Al Thompson, of the White Sox, each turned in five victories and one defeat. George Uhle, of Cleveland, this week lost his first game in five games.

The Yankees still lead the league in team points, with an average of 326, or six points higher than last week. Boston has taken first place in team fielding, with an average of 982—one point higher than Phillips, who was second. The Indians and brooklyns were of a very high order and brought forth generous applause. The Bulldogs' other first place came in the 50-yard free style when Hoyne won an exciting race.

This may be brought to a conclusion out of the most successful seasons the Tech swimmers have ever had.

Air Mail Helps In Atlanta Drive For Convention

The air mail has been used to advantage in the recent campaign to bring the 1929 convention of the National Education Association to Atlanta. The invitation, signed by several civic bodies and educational leaders, was sent to J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the association, Washington, by the first northbound mail to leave Atlanta and Mr. Crabtree's acknowledgement of its receipt was received less than 48 hours later by the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

Now the bureau and educational leaders meeting on May 2 made plans for an intensive campaign to bring this convention with its 10,000 delegates to this city in July, 1929. It was decided at this meeting that in order to gain this end it is imperative that three objectives be first attained.

In the first place the membership of the association in Georgia must be greatly increased before the closing of school in June, since Atlanta must prove to the convention its inducements when the association meets in Minneapolis, July 1 to 6.

The second requisite is that a large Georgia delegation attend the Minneapolis gathering and boost intensively and extensively for the capital city.

The third essential is the attainment of the aid of delegations from as many states as possible and pledging their delegations to support of Atlanta's campaign.

The educational group has not had a convention in the south since 1920, when Charleston, S. C., was the host city. One of the objections to the Dixie cities which have tried to get the gathering has been the claim of excessive temperatures. This objection does not hold when applied to Atlanta, for the latest information from the weather bureau records for the past 40 years shows the average daily temperature of 78 degrees for the first seven days in July.

A committee to handle Atlanta's convention has been formed, with L. D. Dunn as its head. This committee will hold its next meeting in room 14 at the Biltmore hotel on Monday, May 14. The chairman expressed the hope that superintendents of schools who will be in the city attending the Dixie convention at that time will attend the meeting. All others who are interested in bringing the association here also are invited to attend.

School Graduates Wanted By Employers, Says Bureau

Young, especially youth educated in the high schools and colleges, is demanded by the average employer applying to the Community Employment service, according to Miss Frances E. Miller, who is in general charge of the office.

Above the school age, women are more in demand than men. This is disclosed in the March report of the bureau's activities, which showed that 149 women were placed in employment during the month against 116 men. Employers called for 158 women and only 77 men.

"Parents generally should realize the fact that employers these days want graduates," Miss Hunter said. "They may be college or high school graduates, but they must be graduates. One or two are even in the high school not enough."

"The corporations take these young people into their organizations and train them."

There is no definite age limit, Miss Hunter said. Employers will take skilled accountants, for instances, up to 40 years of age. Fifty or more is no handicap for a carpenter. Generally speaking, youth is preferred. Under 30 is generally the requirement, and in certain classes of office work under 25.

Strange to say younger men are being demanded as night watchmen. There used to be no age limit.

The most hopeless applicants for work, Miss Hunter said, are men over 30 who have no special training.

Speaking generally, Miss Hunter said there had been some improvement in the employment situation during the past six months. She mentioned certain handicaps which which had妨害了 this improvement.

The saddest part of the employment situation, Miss Hunter said, is the plight of handicapped men and women. The handicap may be age, blindness, or some kind of deformity.

A survey is being made by the Bureau of Employment Security, an authoritative speaker on social and economic conditions, having studied these elements in travels throughout America and abroad. Mr. Cowen has been

CHRYSLER TO MAKE DESOTO

The identity of the manufacturer sponsoring the new DeSoto Six which has aroused so much speculative interest among motorists this past month was today definitely revealed in an announcement made by the manager of offices and director of the DeSoto Motor corporation, and listing among them Walter P. Chrysler and the principal executives of the Chrysler corporation.

The president of the DeSoto Motor corporation is J. E. Fields, who is vice-president in charge of sales of the Chrysler corporation.

Charles W. Matheson is vice-president in charge of sales for DeSoto. Mr. Matheson was formerly vice-president in charge of sales for Dodge Brothers, and later vice-president in charge of sales for Oakland and Pontiac.

Another vice-president of the DeSoto Motor corporation and also its treasurer is B. E. Hutchinson, who has many years has been vice-president and treasurer of the Chrysler corporation.

The DeSoto board of directors, as announced, includes the foregoing officers and the following well-known men: W. C. Lederay, Mrs. W. C. Lederay, chairman, who is also president and chairman of the board of directors of the Chrysler corporation; W. Ledyard Mitchell, who is vice-president and general manager of the Chrysler corporation; Fred M. Zeder, vice-president and general manager of the Chrysler corporation and K. T. Keller, vice-president in charge of manufacturing of the Chrysler corporation. F. A. Morrison will be secretary of the DeSoto Motor corporation. Davis, W. C., treasurer, and L. A. Moehring, comptroller.

In answer to questions about the new car President Fields said:

"The new DeSoto Six will bring to motorists an entirely new conception of value in the medium-priced six-cylinder market. It will have all the unique advantages of Chrysler's rich background of experience in designing, engineering and manufacturing. Sponsored by Chrysler, it will instantly proclaim its Chrysler parentage and its Chrysler quality. It will be competitive, but will not compete with any of the four Chrysler lines. We believe that its excellence is so apparent that people will immediately recognize it as far, very far, in advance of all offerings in its field."

Religious School To Open Annual Sessions Today

The eighth annual session of the Atlanta Student Training School for Religious Workers will begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Wesley Memorial Methodist church. Today's meeting is for the purpose of organizing the school, which will have classes with courses for lesson assignments and enrollment. The regular sessions are to start Monday night and will be held every night through Friday. The daily program starts with 15 minutes in the school at 6:15 o'clock, immediately after which there will be a 25-minute devotional period. Following the devotions will be the first class period, from 7:15 to 8:15 o'clock, then a 15-minute period of 35 minutes with the second and last class period from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

The school, which is designed primarily for the instruction of those interested in various phases of religious work, has divided into beginning, primary junior and intermediate-senior departments and has a faculty of nine persons. The school is in charge of a board of directors, which includes Bishop W. B. Chapman, having succeeded the late Joel Hunter in this position.

The courses are divided into two general units and seven specialized units, each under the direction of a faculty member. Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, of Nashville, Tenn., editor of the Quarterly Review of the church, has one of the general units. Dr. Rowe will be in charge of the school as author in this course. The other general unit is on "The Home in Society," and has as its instructor Dr. S. B. Windham, who is secretary of the training education of the American Council of Christian Churches.

The specialization units include the following courses: "The Cradle Roll Child," Miss Willett Allen, instructor; "Primary Lesson Materials," Mrs. H. D. Guerant, instructor; "Primary Lesson Materials," under Mrs. W. B. Ferguson; "Junior Lesson Materials," with Mrs. Clay E. Smith, instructor; "Elementary Senior Lesson Materials," Dr. H. H. Harris, instructor; "Young People's Psychology," taught by Professor E. C. Reece, and a course in city school management under the Rev. Clem Baker.

SLUMS IN AMERICA ARE DISAPPEARING, SAYS HOUSING MAN

Memphis, Tenn., May 5.—(P)—Slums and slum life in American cities are disappearing, Bernard J. Newman, of the Philadelphia Housing association, said in an address read before the health division of the national conference of social work today. Mr. Newman was unable to be present.

The most hopeful sign of the times with regard to better housing in America is the fact that the recognition of the fact that slums are not caused by either landlord or tenant, but are rather the consequence of fair definitions in municipal engineering practices.

"Bad housing is mainly the result of the development of American cities without any well thought out plan. This is being remedied, however, for when a city has a definite plan for one city in this country with a planning commission, there are now more than 300 with a good one."

Healthful living time was advanced by Eugene T. Liles of Chicago, in an address before the neighborhood group of the conference, who declared that "many people are affected with what we call slums." Mr. Liles, a general representative of the Play Ground and Recreational association of America.

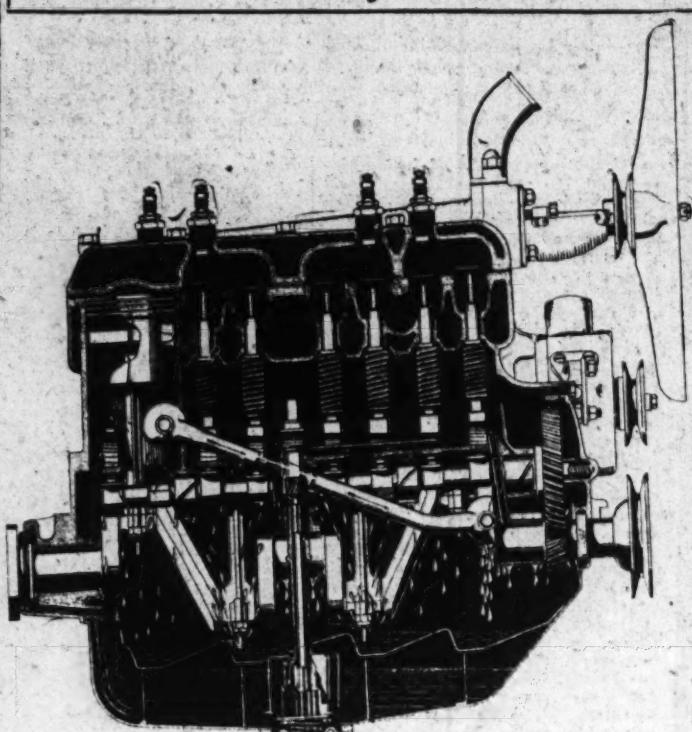

Praying Jury Finds Trolley Operator Guilty of Murder

Shreveport, La., May 5.—(P)—After holding a prayer meeting a jury here today found Blanchard Horn, street car conductor, guilty of murder. W. P. Morris, on September 15, the jury recommended mercy, which automatically makes the penalty life imprisonment.

The case was given to the jury last night and immediately after re-drawing the jury, and the prayer service was held. The verdict was returned this morning.

Horn contended that his wife had been familiar with Morris. The woman was at his home. The woman denied the charge. Recently she divorced Horn, charging cruelty.

How Ford's Model 'A' Oil System Works

The above drawing of a cut-out section of the engine of the new Ford model "A" car shows the motor lubrication system, a combination of pump, splash and gravity feed. This is one of the reasons for the remarkable efficiency of the new Ford motor.

The new model A Ford car is a combination of pump, splash and gravity feed which is an exclusive Ford development.

In design and in operation, it is simple and positive. The inventors have shown it to be ideally suited to this somewhat revolutionary type of four-cylinder, medium-speed, medium-compression motor.

The oil pump is located in the bottom of the crank-case and is driven off a gear on the cam-shaft. It is enclosed in a fine mesh wire screen through which the oil filters before it is pumped into the valve chamber.

The screen is surrounded by a shield so that the oil is properly directed into the oil pan in heavy gravity.

The oil flows into the valve chamber in a continuous stream whenever the engine is running, but it is in no sense a "forced" feed. It is rather the full force of the stream which directs it to the correct gravity feed lubrication to the bearings of the crank-shaft. However, the oil is supplied to the main journal bearing for the valves, giving better and quieter action, and by gravity to the front and cam-shaft bearing.

Small pipe openings lead down from the valve chamber to the crankcase. The engine rests in the chassis on a three-degree angle, sloping to the rear, the oil arriving in the valve chamber flows back, filling the first bearing of the crank-shaft, then filling the second reservoir, and then again to the third and last reservoir. From this point the oil is carried down to the front end of the oil pipe by the crank-shaft, then it goes back over the pan, filling the troughs through which the connecting rods are lubricated and from which all other moving parts are sprayed by the splash system. From the pan the oil goes to the bottom of the engine and is pumped back again.

This rather unique system of engine lubrication is responsible in large measure for the excellent performance of the motor in a wide range of speeds and in all types of service.

When the model A car was in its experimental stages much of the road test work was done in midsummer, yet there never was a single instance of engine overheating.

Small pipe openings lead down from the valve chamber to the crankcase.

LUMBER PLANT FIRE LOSS ABOUT $1,000,000

Valley Forge, Pa., May 5.—(P)—A page of American history, written 150 years ago, came to life today on the green hills of Valley Forge.

Re-enactors, representing General Washington and other revolutionary characters, moved in pageant over the trees of the nation's semicentennial, the sesquicentennial of the continental army's celebration of the formation of the French alliance.

Prominent men portrayed various historical characters, and Colonial figures of American independence.

The American Revolution impersonated the wives of officers who attended the celebration in 1778. Detachments from the Pennsylvania national guard represented Washington's troops.

After moving across the field in review before "General Washington," the troops were drawn up and as a battery of artillery fired 13 guns and the rifles started a running fire.

After the review, the King of France followed salutes by the artillery and the rolling of drums.

The program was arranged by various Pennsylvania societies.

FOURTEEN WOMEN OF GENERAL STAFF TO ATTEND REUNION

At least 14 ladies of General W. D. Hamilton, of the Georgia state legislature of the United Confederate Veterans are planning to attend the general reunion to be held in Little Rock, Ark., May 8 to 12. Staff members report that 100 members of the largest regiments which had affiliated in reunion for several years.

The headquarters of the gathering in Little Rock will be at the Marion hotel and it is reported the city is exceptionally well prepared to care of the visiting veterans and the ladies of the auxiliary units.

The Atlanta staff members who plan to make the trip are: Mrs. Walter Lomax, matron of honor; Mrs. J. L. Coleman, assistant matron; Mrs. L. L. Palmer, matron of honor; Mrs. Frank Golden, chaperone; Miss Marion Speer, sponsor; Miss Ruth Speer, assistant sponsor; Mrs. R. M. Carraway, matron of the maid of honor; the Misses Dorothy Harris, Mrs. H. H. Hamilton, Miss Frances Cason and Miss Mary Reese, of Fairburn, and Miss Sarah Madeline, of Thomasville, maid of honor, will also make the trip.

FIND DEAD BODIES OF YOUNG WOMAN AND TWO MEN

Washington, May 5.—(P)—Oral testimony in the Vare-Wilson senatorial election contest from Pennsylvania is to be taken by the senate elections sub-committee.

Those who agreed upon today at the request of counsel for William B. Wilson, democrat, who was defeated in the face of the returns by William S. Vare, republican, in the senate race of 1926, said they were not required to start at this time and the sub-committee gave them two weeks in which to prepare.

Testimony is to be offered in support of the charge by Wilson that there was conspiracy and fraud in the voting in Philadelphia, Allentown and other cities.

Expand Facilities To Boost Production of Whippet Fours

Toledo, Ohio, May 5.—Willys-Overland's expansion program to increase the production of Whippet four and Whippet six models to meet the greatest buying demand in the company's history is taking definite form, officials of the organization declared here this week.

The new addition to the export and body-building departments, which provides 800,000 more square feet of factory space is nearly completed, this extension being necessary when the output of Whippet cars stepped up to the greatest production mark ever reached by the company.

Willys-Overland is concentrating its efforts on increased production of Whippet fours and sixes, this being the dominating class in the automobile industry. It is estimated that in the lower price ranges 47 per cent of all sales are made in the price groups below $750, with 23 per cent of the total sales being in the price class from $750 to $1,000. The new and greater production in this price class of the Whippet models and it is in this group that the company has expanded its facilities to reach the highest production in history.

In quantity output this production of Willys-Overland to night production on its two Whippet models which provide the major business for the sales organization, the balance being devoted

DRIVING SEAT LIKE BRIDGE OF LINER

Like the bridge of an ocean liner from which the captain can see not only miles ahead, but the entire world, the driving seat of Pierce-Arrow car is so arranged that the driver has full vision thus eliminating one of the greatest causes for accidents.

It is based upon this design, the owner of a Pierce-Arrow car said recently: "While driving my Pierce-Arrow I feel unusually safe—and calm. Much of this feeling is attributed to the fact that the driving seat is so designed that I have perfect visibility in all directions. In my former car I had to sit on a small cushion in order to look over the hood, and even then I had some narrow scrapes due to obstructions which I could not look up ahead. In the Pierce-Arrow I have complete command of every situation, even being able to see an animal if it suddenly decides to cross the road almost in front of my eyes."

Pierce-Arrow was one of the first manufacturers to use two-speed pillars in its cars, thus permitting greater vision and eliminating the blind spots caused by thick pillars that hid an approaching car a few seconds away. The visibility in front is the result of carefully worked-out design, without sacrificing the lowness of the car.

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Give your Oil Filter a hand when the feller needs a friend

THE AC Oil Filter on your car starts working on the instant every time you start the engine. It constantly filters dirt from the circulating oil.

By so doing it saves wear on the engine. It insures better performance. It relieves you of frequent oil changing.

After a certain mileage, the filtering unit becomes filled with dirt taken from the oil. This happens as a rule about every 10,000 miles.

It's an easy and simple job to test the AC Oil Filter, your dealer will do it gladly without charge. When needed, an AC Renewal Cartridge makes the Filter as good as new.

Don't neglect your Oil Filter. A Renewal Cartridge, when needed, will save you many times its modest cost. For a free test, see your dealer today.

Miami-Chicago Reo Test Run Car Refuels Here

This 1929 Reo Flying Cloud stock roadster last week made a test run from Miami to Chicago piloted by experimental engineers of the Reo factory. In Atlanta it paused for five minutes at Reo Sales and Service, Inc., 419 Peachtree street, N. E., to refuel and was greeted by H. D. De Hart, Reo's advertising manager; R. P. Ostrander, of the Buchen Advertising Agency, and C. F. Watson, local Reo branch manager. Between Miami and Atlanta the car averaged 59.9 miles per hour, making the run in 13 hours and 37 minutes. The Miami-Chicago run was made in 30 hours and 25 minutes at an average speed of 52.6 miles per hour, setting a new record.

of poetry ever penned on the subject, just received by Walter P. Chrysler from Byron J. King, of Pittsburgh.

"I have been driving one of your '29 Chryslers," writes King. "I have spoken to me from the first time that I took the wheel in my hand that Chrysler cars possess a distinct personality, a personality that changes with the character of the driver, with the season of the year, with the hour of the day."

"Hour after hour I have sat behind the wheel of a Chrysler and have clowned the air like a falcon or sounded majestically as an eagle. I have watched them sleep and gleaming with the first light of early morning, and staunch and braves through the drenching rain and snow of the darkest night."

"The little eyes of the motor car are better than this note my regard and appreciation for the Chrysler motor car:

"Silver Wings."

"Two gleaming wings on a silver crown."

"A blur of blue on the broad highway;

"A whispering song for the crest of

And a velvet pause where the valleys lay."

"Two proud little wings on a haughty crest, Rouaring at the edge of the golden dawn."

"A heart that speaks to the pulse of youth

With its eager murmur—"On and on!"

"Oh, stanned little wings on your brave we cap, Ah! flying shadow that skims the road!"

"With your dauntless pinions soaring far,

Chrysler, you're more than a motor car."

Girls Employed To Pass False Checks Confess

Philadelphia, May 5.—(AP)—Two young women arrested here today told police that they were employed by a syndicate which uses girls to pass fraudulent checks. They said the syndicate had operated in New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh and other large cities.

The prisoners identified themselves as Betty Todd, 23, of Indianapolis, and Iris Pansay, 21, of Martinsville, Ind.

The girls said that eight others had been brought to this city with two men supervisors who looked after all the actual passing of the checks.

These men, on coming to a city, opened accounts in various banks. Checks were then drawn against these accounts, usually for an amount about twice the cost of an article, the girls were told to cash the checks.

When the girls returned with merchandise and money, the men immediately closed their accounts at the banks, thus making the checks worthless.

The girls were arrested when each tried to cash a check in the same department store at the same time, neither knowing the other was there.

When a Child's Life Is at Stake

BY WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Too often the price of motoring is the life of a small child. Accidents often are unavoidable, the fault of no one, and due solely to unfortunate circumstances beyond the control of man. The fact that they are unpredictable, however, does not minimize the sorrow that follows in their wake. The hearts they sadden and the lives they shatter call for one sovereign remedy, and that is caution.

The beautiful, sunshiny days of spring and summer are the unwitting heralds of daily traffic tragedies. Thousands of small children who have no safe place for play are forced into the streets. Thoroughfares are not intended to be used as playgrounds, but whether it is right or not the street will continue to be the playground, and as long as children are allowed to play, speed continues to be inadequate. The motorist, it is continually to be a source of unalloyed pleasure, every motorist must pledge himself to drive with care, particularly when children are at play. Driving with care perhaps may mean going more slowly than one desires, but it is what one would want another motorist to do if his own child were to dart before an automobile.

HARRIS IS NAMED TO HIGH POSITION BY ODD FELLOWS

O. C. Harris, well-known figure in a number of fraternal orders in Atlanta, has been elected to the position of grand master of the sixteenth division, L. O. O. F., to succeed Harry L. Brown, it was announced Saturday.

Other officers elected were C. W. Norman, grand warden; Fletcher W. Lewis, division secretary; and J. T. Upchurch, division treasurer.

Other officers will be appointed later, it was announced. The recent spring convention held at Sandy Springs Lodge, No. 278, was declared a great success, with several hundred representatives and visitors present.

MILLION DOLLARS INVOLVED IN SUIT OF FORMER WIFE

Monomoy, Mich., May 5.—(AP)—A million dollars is at stake in the suit of Mrs. Margaret Isadora Lloyd, of Los Angeles, Calif., against the estate of her former husband, Marshall Burns Lloyd, inventor, philanthropist and manufacturer. The case is set for trial here Monday.

Mrs. Harrietta E. Lloyd, second wife, and son, Isaac B. Lipson, of Chicago, and the Detroit Trust company, executors of the will, are defendants.

The plaintiff seeks the $1,000,000 as her rightful share as the widow of the millionaire. Her suit is based on the contention that she was illegally divorced by Mr. Lloyd and she was his lawful wife at the time of his death last August.

Mexico City has started an investigation of living conditions of children of the working classes, with a view of improving the situation.

BLALOCK TO OPEN HOWELL MILL ROAD REVIVAL MEETINGS

A thirty-day series of revival meetings conducted by Evangelist Joe Blalock will start in a tent at the corner of Crooked road and Howell Mill road at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. There will be services every night at 7:30 o'clock, with Mr. Blalock doing the preaching and J. U. Mooney leading the singing.

Mr. Blalock is a native Georgian and has conducted revivals in more than a score of states.

The evangelist has a series of revival sermons, based largely on passages from the Book of Revelations, which he plans to give during this revival.

ALL OSTEOPATHS IN STATE EXPECTED AT ALBANY MEETING

Practically every osteopath in the state is expected to attend the convention of the Georgia Osteopathic Association, which convenes in Albany Monday and Tuesday of this week. All the clinics, discussions and addresses, which will be given at the Radium Springs hotel, are open to the public. One of the principal addresses will be given by Dr. C. J. Gardner.

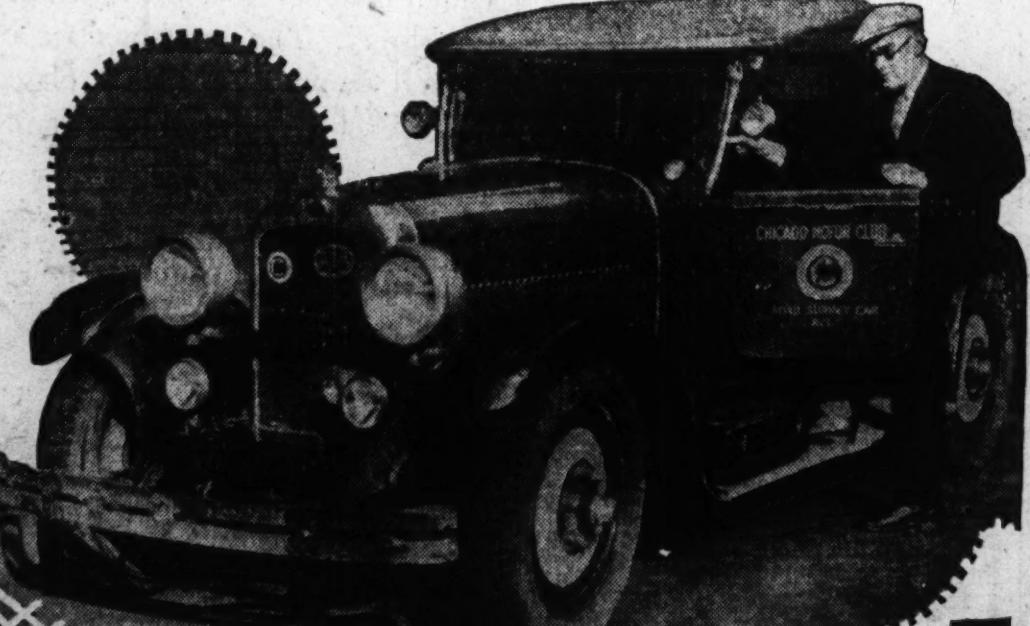

The Georgia gathering will come as a forerunner to the national convention of osteopaths which will be held in Kirkville, Mo., August 5 to 10.

The national meeting is to mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of the founder of osteopathy, Dr. Andrew Taylor Still.

Nearly 10,000 members of the profession are expected to gather at Kirkville to honor the memory of the founder and to view the world's largest osteopathic school, which is located at that place.

TWO NEW MODELS FOR GRAHAM-PAIGE

R. C. CROWDER PREDICTS BIG USED CAR SEASON

Two new cars, a coupe and a cabriolet, have been added to the Graham-Paige 629 models—six-cylinder, 120-inch wheelbase chassis. Production of the new type will begin at once, the first shipments to be made this week.

The new models are distinctively styled. The cabriolet seats two in the front and two in the rumble seat. The coupe has the same seating arrangement, the combination of a permanent top and rumble seat resulting in a car with a wide range of usefulness.

Both the coupe and cabriolet are priced at $2,185, which includes front and rear bumpers and two extra detachable top or door hood carried in fender wells, one at each side of the car. Tires are 31x6.

With the addition of these two cars, there are five models in the 629 series, all of them being the five-passenger sedan, five-passenger town sedan, and seven-passenger sedan.

Model 629 is the largest of the Graham-Paige, six-cylinder models. The 619 chassis, 119-inch wheelbase, is virtually its twin except in length. Both chassis have the same engine, which develops 57-h. p. and also the four-speed transmission, spring cushioned clutch with vibration damped, and other characteristic Graham-Paige features. The 619 is produced in two body styles, the five-passenger sedan and the four-passenger coupe, at $1,505 and $1,575, respectively.

OIL FILTER PATENT SUIT IS DISMISSED

The lawsuit brought by Motor Improvement Corporation against the AC Spark Plug company, charging infringement of its patent, was dismissed in favor of the AC company. Court costs were assessed against the plaintiff.

Indications that early summer will witness one of the most phenomenal seasons in the sale of used automobiles was set forth Saturday in an interview with R. C. Crowder, used cars as that demonstrated by Lambeth-Eskridge company.

"It was not many years ago," the used car manager pointed out, "when the purchaser of a used car took 'his car' or at least the life of automobile into his own hands. The odds were as much against him as in his favor that the car had been misused by its former owner. But today in dealing with a responsible used car equipped to recondition cars as new cars are built and confined to the policy of only the best, the buyer of a used car is as safe as the buyer of a new one."

"However, we are obliged to attribute the bulk of our record sales to the large volume of trading being done by the new car owner, and confined to our concern. The steady demand for the new popular-priced Dodge, with which variety meeting every occasion, has been the greatest factor in direct stimulation of our used car sales."

car manager of Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company, distributors of the popular Dodge automobile for this territory.

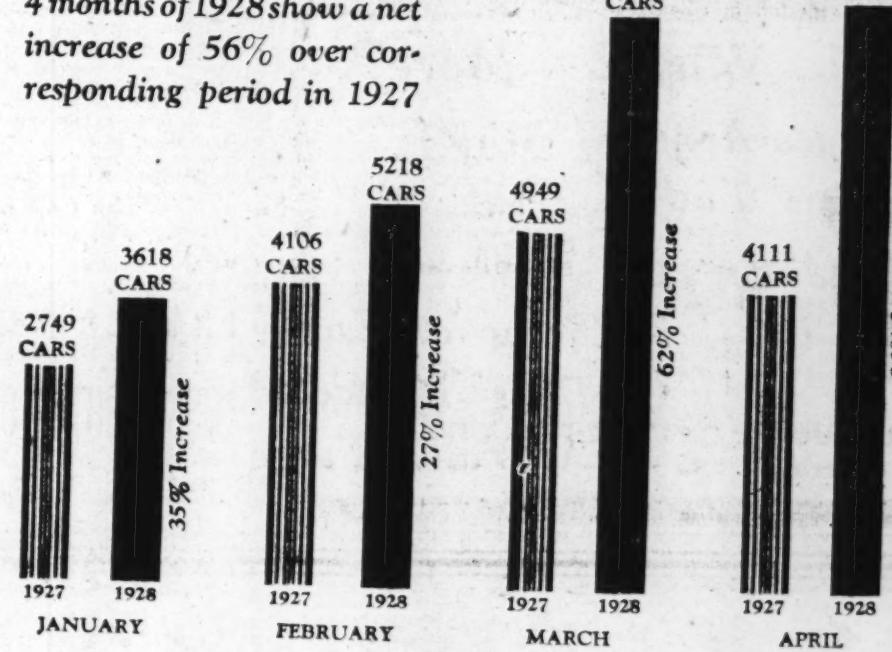

The announcement was made by Mr. Crowder following a recent meeting of sales and advertising department. In discussing the factors responsible for building up the used car business with such rapidity Mr. Crowder stressed the importance of creating confidence in the general buying public, as well as the advantage accruing from being connected with a concern handling so large a volume of sales in new cars to the monthly meeting of the Atlanta Garage association, to be held Wednesday evening, May 9, at 6:30 o'clock on the roof garden of the Cecil hotel, because of important business discussions.

The Atlanta Garage association is made up of 35 of the leading, reputable, responsible garages of the city, and is a part of the big Atlanta Automobile Association. Since its organization several years ago, the garage association has accomplished many constructive things, of direct benefit to the motoring public; in fact, the aim of the association is to foster efficiency among its members, and aid in building up the car business with the highest possible type of service to their customers.

The 1928 officers are: John Hargrave, president; Raleigh Drennon, vice-president; J. S. Cannon, secretary-treasurer; C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary.

8082 Cars Sold in April

Gaining rapid momentum as the year advances, sales of the new Hupmobile Century Six and Eight again reached a new all-time high level in April with shipments of 8082 cars.

April also completes the largest four months' business since Hupmobile began the manufacture of motor cars.

In this great influx of buying orders, Hupmobile recognizes a tribute not only to a brilliant new type of beauty, but also to a new type of finer performance created for the Hupmobile Century Six and Eight.

You can be assured that the Century Hupmobile you buy today embodies all the sound goodness and brilliant, reliable performance which are the Hupmobile tradition.

AIR-TIGHT FITS FEATURE ESSEX CARS

When the steamship Sultana pulled into Chicago recently after a severe storm on Lake Michigan, Captain David Smith reported a remarkable happening with 42 Essex Super-Six sedans and coaches which were swept overboard.

Captain Smith reported that instead of sinking the cars floated readily amid the high-rolling waves and could be seen still afloat as the ship traveled out of sight. As they were closed cars, tightly constructed and with all doors and windows "closed," the theory is that the air within the bodies was sufficient to float them until waves should break the window glass or capsize the whole automobile in the wave troughs.

"That was a sight for you—a line-up of cars like a miniature fleet of life-boats," said Captain Smith. "They were loosened from the dock in whole rows when the rope lashing broke, consequently they slipped overboard in regular formation. I expected them to go to the bottom immediately, but they did not do that. The air kept them up and the axles, motor and frame acted as ballast. They're of good balance for they floated erectly and steadily in the heavy seas. This was the hardest storm I have ever seen in many years on the lake."

The cars were on their way—the season's first water shipment—to the Hudson Motor company, of Illinois. The cars were insured, and J. R. Husted, general manager and vice president of the concern, was scarcely downcast at all about the incident. Instead, he said:

"This is just a bit out of the usual as a demonstration, but there are certain distinctive things about those Essex cars which would simply make them float. The construction is so tight, the doors and windows are so snug, that the air supply would be retained for hours. Essex bodies are much similar to steel ships in their construction."

"The launch storm-tight qualities thus surprisingly proved, are well known to hundreds of thousands of motorists."

Cadillac Leads All Year National Highway

SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR COMMERCIAL CARS

ly associated with truck performance, "The rapid construction of paved roads and wider highways and the manufacturing facilities to build trucks or commercial cars particularly adapted to every line of business are awakening the public to the possibilities of motor transportation ever imagined before," said Mr. Sneathen. "For the same reasons, operators of truck fleets are finding expansion profitable and necessary in a competitive market that demands economy, speed and dependability in transportation."

"Figures in our own company show truck orders for March this year totaled 4,342, compared to 3,160 for February, a gain of 1,182 units or 37 per cent, and indicative of the trend to increased sales."

"Analysis of new commercial car and truck registrations shows that the number of commercial trucks for the first two months of 1928, compared to 1927 are well distributed among agricultural and industrial states. It indicates that while some sections of the country have dropped behind last year's mark, no depression in any particular section is apparent. Conditions of this type are far more encouraging than if figures revealed a slump in several trade lines."

RESCUE MISSION OF WIDE FAME DIES

Reading, Pa., May 5.—(AP)—Rev. William A. White, superintendent of Hope Rescue mission here for 27 years, and nationally known for his rescue work for men, died suddenly at the mission last night. He was born in Ireland and after coming to the United States 35 years ago was for many years a religious worker on the Bowery, New York. He was ordained as a Presbyterian minister some years ago. He recently celebrated his 25th anniversary in the local mission.

FULL ELLIPTIC SPRINGS CUSHION BRAKE EFFECT

Now that virtually all cars are equipped with four-wheel brakes, automotive engineers are turning their attention to perfecting this method of stopping. Brakes of efficient design are standard on most cars today so that every motorist is assured of a prompt stop in case of emergency, provided ordinary attention is given to keeping the braking mechanism properly adjusted.

Engineers, however, are seeking means to decelerate cars not only quickly and without effort, but smoothly so that the occupants will feel little if any of the shock of sudden stops.

Through exhaustive tests carried on for more than a quarter of a century, the Franklin Automobile company has established the worth of the full-elliptic spring in softening and eliminating the shocks of quick starts and stops as well as the jars arising in ordinary travel over rough pavements, street car tracks and country roads.

Franklin Airman cars are equipped exclusively with this type of spring, having springs on each side equivalent to an ordinary semi-elliptic longer than the wheelbase of the car. The result of the cushioning effect is at occasion surprising among people experiencing it for the first time, and the resiliency of the spring in riding coupled with Franklin's weight distribution, are claimed to be responsible for the well-known easy riding qualities which these cars provide.

CADILLACS LEAD BROADWAY MOTORCADE

When the Broadway of America motorcade left San Diego, Calif., on April 11, for the Broadway of America association's convention in Memphis, Tenn., April 20 and 21, the caravan was led by two new Cadillac sedans, according to an air mail letter from J. E. Brown, southern California manager for Don Lee, California distributor for Cadillac and LaSalle motor cars.

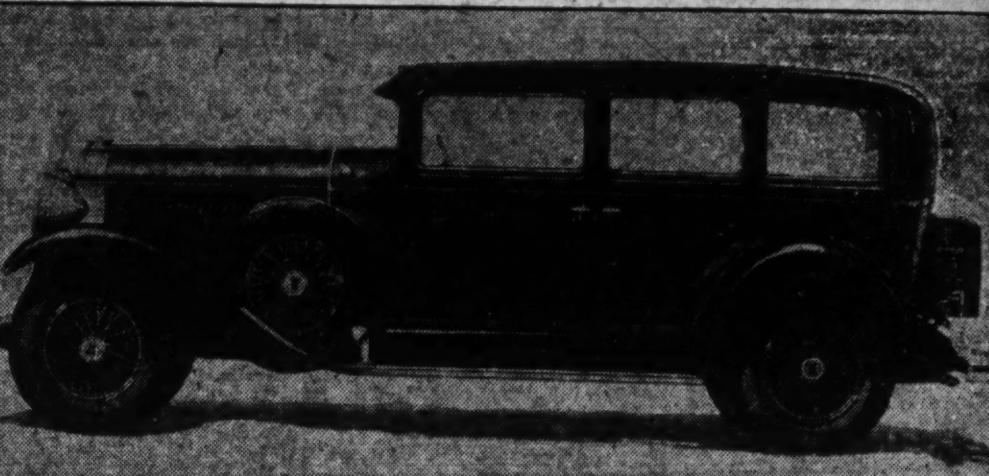

The motorcade was one of the most unusual spectacles ever presented in the history of the motor car, for before it arrived in Memphis more than 400 automobiles had fallen into line. About 100 cars from southern California left in the motorcade from San Diego.

An eastern contingent starting from Broadway, New York, coming through Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charlottesville and Nashville, was scheduled to meet the western contingent at Memphis.

The Pacific coast cavalcade was headed by Colonel Ed. Fletcher, vice president of the Broadway of America association, and chairman of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce highway committee. It traveled to Yuma, Phoenix, Tucson and Douglas, Ariz., to El Paso, Midland, Fort Worth and Dallas, Texas, to Oklahoma and Little Rock, Ark., to Memphis.

When the big trip was planned,

Outselling Factory's Fastest Production

"One of the world's prettiest," that's what this car really is, and if public endorsement means anything it's destined to even greater heights. This and other new Hupmobile eight and six-cylinder cars are shown by the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, local distributors.

Colonel Fletcher decided to obtain as well the mechanical excellence of this car, through his branch at San Diego. This car, one of newspapermen and an executive of the association, and this car headed the procession from the west coast.

"Although the Broadway of America association is less than a year old, the idea of a paved highway from New York to San Diego is like wild life across the country."

CADILLAC-LA SALLE 90-DEGREE V-TYPE EIGHT

Unrivaled AMONG FINE CAR ENGINES

WITH its overwhelmingly large fine-car following, Cadillac is able to accomplish results almost literally impossible to any other institution.

the blocks at a V-shaped angle of 90 degrees, instead of aligning the entire eight cylinders, one after the other in a straight line.

There is only one way to give what Cadillac gives and that is by commanding and maintaining a market as great as Cadillac's.

Lesser volume must of necessity mean surrender in some one or a dozen essentials of fine manufacturing—surrender of quality; surrender in size; surrender in the exquisite beauty exemplified in Cadillac and LaSalle's Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood bodies . . .

—or, more serious than all else, surrender of the high refinement and efficiency of such a superbly smooth motor as the 90-degree, V-type, 8-cylinder engine which powers both the new Cadillac and LaSalle;

—an engine which embodies the superior 8-cylinder principle of mounting the eight cylinders in two blocks of four cylinders,

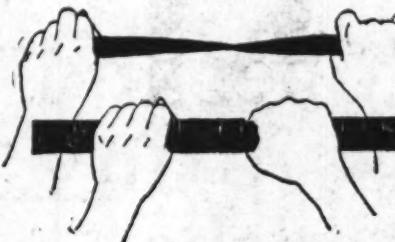

Here are plain facts the public readily observes, seeing Cadillac raising quality and holding down price, observing elsewhere the remorseless law of lesser volume working out in the only way it can work out:

Giving less and less than Cadillac-LaSalle; drawing farther and farther away from the Cadillac-LaSalle class; sinking into lower markets which shut them out from the last vestige of comparison with Cadillac and LaSalle.

With the inevitable result that today Cadillac and LaSalle stand practically alone in the highest fine-car field.

New lower LaSalle prices, $2350 to $2875. Cadillac prices, $3295 to $3950. Exclusive Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood custom-built bodies up to $5500. All prices f. o. b. Detroit

Advantages of Short Crankshaft in Cadillac-LaSalle

ONE of the chief superiorities of the 90-degree, V-type, Cadillac principle of 8-cylinder operation is the short, rigid Cadillac crankshaft. Hold a ruler by the ends. Note how easily you can twist it. Now shorten, by one-half, the distance between your hands. You can twist the ruler only with much greater effort. This illustrates how much greater is the resistance to torque (twisting strain) of the short, compact, Cadillac crankshaft, as compared with crankshafts twice its length.

Cadillac welcomes an opportunity to prove these statements. A phone call will bring a demonstrator at your convenience.

Explorer's Sword Found As New De Soto 6 Is Announced

Detroit, Mich., May 5—An extraordinary case of coincidence occurred recently in the initial announcement of the DeSoto Six, the new six-cylinder car to be produced under the sponsorship of the Chrysler corporation.

The first trade announcement of the DeSoto Motor corporation appeared March 25. This was a so-called advertisement, containing the single word, "DeSoto," on the automobile dealers in the country through the mails and in the advertising pages of the automobile publications, the extraordinary announcement—obviously the name of a new car—was a nation-wide wave of gossip and speculation.

Then the next day, March 26, there appeared in an Associated Press dispatch the story of the discovery in Carters, Ga., of the hilt and guard and part of the blade of an iron sword which was once the possession of Hernando DeSoto, the famous explorer after whom the DeSoto Six is named.

Almost 400 years ago DeSoto, in search of gold and fabled riches of the new world, visited the Indian city of Chiaha, now conceded to be Rome, Ga., and remained there for 27 days as the guest of the Etowah Indians. He was then ambushed and wounded in the initial skirmish of the DeSoto Six, named as were the Cadillac, the LaSalle and the Lafayette, a remembrance of one of the heroic figures of early American discovery.

That this archaeological find should be made in the same locality which presented the sword evidently was the result of the sword evidently presented by DeSoto to one of the Indian braves, has been unearthed in a burial mound near Carters by Dr. Warren K. Moorehead, head of the department of archaeology of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

Through histories and diaries

Moorehead's discovery was pre-

$400,000 Offered Kenosha 'Y' by Mr., Mrs. C. W. Nash

Kenosha, Wis.—An offer of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Nash, of Kenosha, to give $400,000 toward the erection and endowment of a Young Men's Christian association building in Kenosha, in the event a similar sum for the project is raised by popular subscription, has been announced by the board of directors of the Kenosha Y. M. C. A. Announcement also was made that the directors have accepted the offer on the conditions named.

A stipulation in the offer provides that the proposed institution shall be "erected on the land of all religious houses of whatever denominations, and that each and every religious denomination shall be treated as a part of the institution, and that one religious denomination will be as welcome as another."

In a letter outlining the offer, Mr.

W. W. Vincent, president of the Kenosha Y. M. C. A., organization, said: "It is my understanding that the Kenosha Y. M. C. A. organization has made a survey of the city for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not there was a necessity existing for a Y. M. C. A. building in Kenosha. I am also advised that the survey develops the fact that there is a necessity existing for that kind of institution in Kenosha, and the board of directors feels that steps should be taken at once for the creation of a Y. M. C. A. building.

"If you will raise $400,000 of the $800,000 estimate, Mrs. Nash and I will match that amount ourselves. It is my hearty hope and desire that the movement will be continued, however, that there is no obligation upon person to contribute the $400,000 unless we are satisfied that you have raised the other $400,000.

"In conclusion, let me say that Mrs.

Nash and I would not be interested at all unless the population of Kenosha is interested and will get whole-heartedly behind the proposition, and continues that interest in the future.

"We are strong believers in the work that can be accomplished by the Y. M. C. A. throughout the world.

We believe it is an institution that should be regarded as a builder of men. To our minds, there is nothing that contributes so much to good

American manhood and citizenship as to have the opportunity of associating

The letter was signed by Mr. and Mrs. Nash.

A resolution incorporating the offer, and pledging support to the program for raising the $400,000, was unanimously adopted by the board of directors and advisory board. The resolution was prepared by C. E. Randall.

W. W. Vincent, president of the Kenosha Y. M. C. A., expresses confidence that the remaining $400,000 will be raised without difficulty.

A New Feature in Morris Service in addition to financing your home we present, by special arrangement with the owners of beautiful

HILLS

the opportunity of financing both lot and home in this exclusive Atlanta section upon payment of

OF THE TOTAL COST OF HOUSE AND LOT

This home has four bedrooms and two baths, driveway and garage, and is modern in every detail. Embodied in the construction are such features as tile roof, scagliola baths, hardwood floors, mirror doors, cedar closets and other appointments. Under the Morris Plan of Home Ownership this home can be built and financed in beautiful Garden Hills on the lot of your choice.

For Instance:
total cost of the house and lot would be $11,450.00, and the balance is arranged monthly in accordance with the liberal Morris Home Ownership Plan.

Suppose you select the particular house pictured above, costing $8,950.00, and then choose a lot worth $2,500.00. In that instance the total cost of the house and lot would be $11,450.00. On this basis the total cash payment would be $1,145.00, and the balance is arranged monthly in accordance with the liberal Morris Home Ownership Plan.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

R. R. OTIS CITES SPACE DEMAND

Additions of new tenants and expansions of space used by old ones in the Peachtree Arcade building were announced yesterday by R. R. Otis, agent for the building, who reported a better demand for stores and office space.

Among the new tenants were the following:

T. J. Smith, a jeweler, who recently opened his business in room 40.

J. H. Hulme, agent for a concern manufacturing jewelry, recently leased space in room 40.

Mrs. Olive Ramsey, a psychologist, recently leased quarters in room 319.

The Joseph Weiss Sales System leased room 201.

The M. G. Morris Waite Book shop leases additional space for its business, taking 119, 121 and 123.

The Old Dutch Carbon and Paper company at 386 Peachtree arcade took on additional space.

Atlanta Sunday night, June 17, returning Sunday, June 24.

Talk on Loans
By Chapman
Set for Board

A. B. Chapman, vice president of Weyman & Connors and well known in real estate circles, will be principal speaker at the second of a series of lectures on real estate financing to be held at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the offices of the Atlanta Real Estate board. It was announced Saturday by Frank C. Owens, president of the board. Mr. Chapman will talk on the steps to be considered in obtaining a first mortgage and a second mortgage.

The opening lecture of the series, which is one of the board's educational activities, was held last Thursday. The speaker was H. C. Williams, president of the National Guaranty Company of America, who used as his subject the importance of real estate financing to real estate ownership and the part real estate financing plays in selling real estate.

According to President Owens, the speaker's long experience as a banker and a dealer in real estate financing enabled him to discuss this important subject with thoroughness and clearness. He said that the more familiar a real estate salesman is with all phases of real estate financing the more capable he is in selling real estate, thereby increasing his earnings, Mr. Owens said.

"Members of the Real Estate board are invited to attend in this series of lectures and a large attendance is expected at each meeting," the president asserted.

Another interesting activity at these meetings is the five-minute talk made by R. R. Otis, outlining the new rates, rules and customs and their proper application.

New Pamphlet Of Adams-Cates
Boosts Atlanta

Advantages offered by Atlanta for the establishment of branch offices of national companies are effectively set forth in a pamphlet just published by Adams-Cates company, in connection with its agency for the Lullwater building. The circular being mailed to numerous large business firms in the country constitutes a worthy advertisement for this city, it was pointed out.

On the front cover of the pamphlet are the following remarks:

"Although the office of a business may be located by accident or circumstance this is never true in the establishment of its branches. Cold facts are analyzed and the city which appears most advantageous for a branch point for its district is the point selected."

"Only a glance at the list of branch establishments located in Atlanta is needed to show that the most successful and most rapidly growing business executives in America consider this problem and chose Atlanta as the logical site for their southern operations."

"Unquestionably a railroad center, Atlanta is easily accessible to 15 states, power, natural deposits of coal and cheap hydroelectric power, reasonable labor conditions, with back country rich in resources for almost every industry."

"Although Atlanta is thirty-third in population, it stands fifteenth in the United States and is the headquarters for the sixth federal reserve district."

LOCAL REALTORS
PLAN TO ATTEND NATIONAL MEET

Preparations for the twenty-first annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to be held in Louisville, Ky., June 22, are being formulated by local realtors, according to announcement Saturday by Frank C. Owens, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, in predicting one of the most elaborate gatherings in history of the national organization.

Already a program of nationally known real estate men who are experts in all phases of the business have been secured to make talks and lead important discussions.

President Owens further states that his desire this year for the Atlanta Real Estate board to have a large delegation attending this convention, and that at an early date he will appoint a committee to have charge of this activity and work in interest among the membership so as to have a large number attending.

"Reports received from Marshall Ellis, president of the Georgia Real Estate association and E. H. H. Hause, secretary of the Savannah Real Estate board, show that the boards in many Georgia towns will have a good representation. The possibilities are that the entire Georgia delegation will assemble in Atlanta and attend the convention in a body."

"Arrangements have been made for the headquarters of the Atlanta board to be at the Kentucky Hotel while in Louisville. The committee having charge of this activity will meet at an early date and plans will be worked out covering all details of the trip and will be sent to every member of the board for his consideration."

"Present indications are that those attending the convention will leave Atlanta Sunday night, June 17, returning Sunday, June 24."

TAYLOR IS MORRIS' NEW RENT HEAD

Expansion of the renting department of F. P. & George J. Morris into one of the major divisions of the fast-growing concern was disclosed Saturday with announcement of the appointment of G. M. Taylor, one of Atlanta's foremost renting executives, as manager of the enlarged department.

Mr. Taylor was recently connected with the Trust Company of Georgia as manager of its renting department. In this capacity he served for more

This trio of homes owned and occupied by prominent residents of Avondale Estates illustrates the rapid building progress in that recently incorporated municipality. At upper left is the residence of J. R. Miller, 40 Avondale plaza, with its wealth of flowering shrubs and evergreens which are furnished to residents of Avondale by the nurseries there. Next is the home of Dr. J. T. Lyon, a handsome residence on Fairfield plaza, adjacent to the tennis courts and swimming pool in the playground area. The lower home is that of W. C. Antrim, member of the prominent manufacturing firm of Jessup & Antrim. Mr. Antrim is president of the Avondale club. Many other homes are now under construction in this large residential development, many having taken advantage of the financing plan originated here during recent months.

Garage Addition to Glenn Building

View of the Glenn office building as it will look when the automobile parking unit has been completed as an annex. The contract for its erection was let earlier in the week. Future plans call for addition of office space above the garage. Burge & Stevens are the architects.

Parking laws alone will never solve the downtown traffic problem of Atlanta in the opinion of T. L. B. Lyster, vice president and consulting engineer of the National Garages, Inc., Detroit, Mich.

This assertion was made by Mr. Lyster earlier in the week, when he visited the city to close a contract with the National Garage to operate the parking unit that will be erected as an annex to the Glenn office building, on the corner of Marietta and Spring streets.

During his visit here Mr. Taylor has built up a large client list and following him has become recognized for his strict adherence to policy of efficiency and service to the public in management of property holdings for many owners.

The enlarged department of F. P. & George J. Morris, under Mr. Taylor's guiding hand will undertake a general renting business covering the field of industrial and business property, including residences and investment properties. This marks another step in the steady progress being made by the Morris concern, which is now recognized as one of Atlanta's leading residential building and sales organizations.

REALTY COMMISSION TO PUBLISH ROSTER

A list of names of persons refused licensure and of those whose licenses are being prepared by the Georgia Real Estate commission, according to announcement Saturday by J. B. Everett, inspector.

Mr. Everett's statement follows:

"Act of 1925, amended August, 1927, required to publish a list of the names and addresses of all licensed and the names of all persons refused licensure. This list is now being compiled and all parties who have secured application blanks and have not filed same are requested to do so at once, if they wish their names to appear in the roster of licensees."

Characterizing the up-to-date apartment hotel as "the logical solution to the servant problem" Albert Baumberger, resident manager of the Ten Fifty Ponce de Leon apartment hotel, and one of the most experienced hotel men in the city, outlined the problems that face the management of a modern apartment hotel in its effort to render the greatest convenience to its patrons.

Mr. Baumberger is a keen observer in this field, having been associated for more than 20 years with some of the leading hotels and clubs in the south and middle west. While he has left the commercial hotel field to spe-

Sees $5,000,000 in Building Permits for Record May

BY HARRY M. PASCHAL,
Vice President Atlanta Title and Trust Company.

The building permit just issued to Yaarab temple for the erection of the Shrine mosque, amounting to $1,850,000, is of great interest to property owners in the vicinity of this development.

It is estimated that the erection of this building, in conjunction with widening and extension of Kimball street, three blocks to Spring street, will result in enhancement of values in this section of the city.

Building permits for the month of May will probably amount to $5,000,000.

The building permits for April 16 and April 19, 1927, were practically the same. In April, 1927, 402 permits were issued, amounting to $1,110,575, while in April, 1928, 336 permits were issued, amounting to $1,022,797.

May Best Month

Real estate transfers for the month of April, 1928, as compared with April, 1927, show a slight increase in number, but a slight loss in amount.

In April, 1927, 1,750 transfers were made, aggregating $1,017,321.84, while in April, 1928, 1,700 transfers were made, aggregating $844,980.30.

The month of May is usually the third month for real estate sales, and it is estimated that a great many transfers will be made this month, in fact, the first two days' filing shows considerable activity.

There is still a great demand for medium-priced houses, ranging from $7,000 to $10,000.

Of considerable interest to speculators in vacant lots is the announcement of two more resales by lot purchasers in Gardene Hills. In one case, a profit of $325 was realized, the lot having been purchased for $1,800, the lot resold for $2,125. In the other case, a profit of $350 was made by the buyer, he having bought the lot at $1,800, reselling it at $2,450. These profits, when applied to the gross amount of the sales, are not large, but taking into consideration the fact that the lot purchasers had invested in cash about 20 per cent of the purchase price of the lot, the profit is very great to 200 per cent on the investment, and in the other 100 per cent.

Long Lease Details.
Recording of the lease from Louis Wellhouse to Investment Properties.

Another indication of the large volume of business being done by the national firms in the south is revealed in the lease recently signed by the Davis Emergency Equipment Company, of New York, for a suite of offices in the Glenn building.

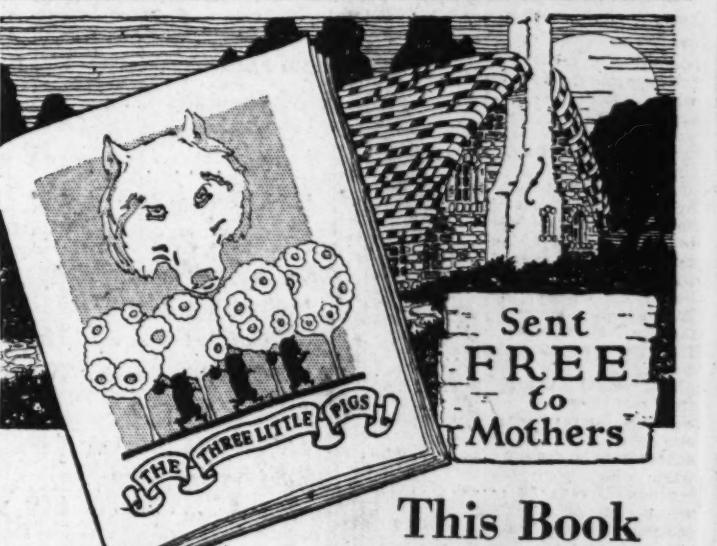

This national organization manufactures and sells to the public utility companies, engineering equipment, such as first aid kits, gas masks for men who work with poisonous gases, and inhalators, the latest device for resuscitating life, and other safety devices.

D. W. Davis, well known Atlanta man, is in charge of the office, which serves Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and a portion of Louisiana.

This Book for Children Tells the Story of BRICK

There's more truth than poetry in these Mother Goose rhymes about the houses of straw, boards and brick. The unrelenting action of sun, wind and rain is indeed a "hungry wolf" gnawing at the home owner's pocketbook. Your investment is safer—your "first cost" cheaper—when you build with brick! Charm of Mediterranean Architecture Exemplified

Plan No. 308-S

Plans from Home Owners Institute, Inc. © 1923.

Spanish characteristics of design, American convenience and modernity of equipment, blend nicely in this plan, No. 308-S, which comprises every requisite of the completely modern home, yet harmoniously maintains Mediterranean architectural values. The designer is W. Kenneth Watkins, A. I. A., registered Rye, N. Y., architect. Complete blueprints of our plans and specifications, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost.

New World Convenience Garbed
In Oldtime Spanish Exterior

Old Precedent Governs Design Done in Modern American Terms of Efficiency, Comfort and Enduring Materials.

By L. PORTER MOORE

President Home Owners Institute, Inc. An architecture developed under the blithe and expansive influence of sunny Andalusian skies has given to the new world that harmonious system of colorful design known to us in the modern Spanish house, a type excellently represented in the plan shown today, No. 308-S. The designer is W. Kenneth Watkins, A. I. A., registered Rye, N. Y., architect. Its content is 35,000 cubic feet.

The old world charm of the Spanish house is here translated into American terms of modern convenience and comfort. The transition is made gracefully, without that feeling of strain which modernization often gives to the architecture. The colors given are appropriate to modern materials, too, find their most graceful use in such settings. For example, the deep reveals of windows and door openings, given by the thick walls of the Spanish houses, are steel casement windows to excellent advantage. The walls might be of common brick, since a widely tolerant precedent was established by builders of the Spanish houses, which were usually of stone. It is better to use a rather thick coating of whitewash, unevenly applied, to simulate the effect of stone on the walls. While some of the Spanish houses were stuccoed, the stuccoed houses have been given three coats of Portland cement stucco on concrete block, hollow tile or galvanized metal lath. Final coat to be colored and textured as directed.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, vines and flashings to be 16-gauge copper.

Casement Windows—To insure maximum light and air, steel case windows in single or multiple units with frames as shown on the plan are recommended. All interior windows are to be electrically welded; all mountings to be flush on both interior and exterior faces. Malleable iron or solid bronze hardware to be used. Frames to be anchored with continuous angles. Bronze screens recommended.

JOHNSON COMPANY TO HOLD AUCTION TUESDAY AT 2 P. M.

Public interest in the beautiful property on West Pace's Ferry road to be offered for sale at auction at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon through the Johnson Realty Auction company, Inc., was manifested in unusual degree during the past week, according to a statement made Saturday by Ben Johnson, president.

"No doubt this enthusiasm is due in large measure to the location of the property to be auctioned," Mr. Johnson explained. "The property that north Fulton county is growing leaps and bounds and each year has found the property enhancing in value.

"The majority of this property has been sold to estate builders, as E. F. Maddox, John W. Grant, Sanders McDaniel, James L. Dickie, R. S. Brandon, Winslow Nunnally and many others. This trend of property lies at the intersection of two prominent thoroughfares in north Fulton county, and has been held intact for many years."

INTEREST SHOWN IN LAKE ROBERTS DEVELOPMENT

Specifications recommended by Home Owners Institute for the proper construction of this plan are outlined as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be of poured concrete or concrete block, made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with water-proofing agent. Foundation to be of common brick, laid in one to three Portland cement mortar, at owner's option. Walls may be of common brick, laid in mortar above specified. All brick work shall have a leaded joint. Foundation walls in each course. Steel basement windows of standard sizes with cambering latches and double contact weathering shall be used.

Inhaler—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with recirculating ducts located in rear of the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be of solid and free from knots, either Douglas or western white pine. White pine for exterior millwork and interior trim; oak floors; steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications. Stucco Work—Exterior walls may

PUBLIC'S AID ASKED BY SALESMEN GROUP

Support of the general public in the movement to eliminate all for sale signs and placards on residential property as a means of beautifying the city and aiding in the "clean up Atlanta" undertaking, is being urged by the Atlanta Real Estate Salesmen's Association, according to a statement issued Saturday by C. A. Blanchard, chairman of the sign removal publicity committee.

The movement has been started before by several civic bodies, but is now being backed with the support of the real estate salesmen of Fulton and DeKalb counties. Civic and business organizations of these two counties have expressed their willingness to cooperate with the association, and it is believed the public will quickly show its support.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, vines and flashings to be 16-gauge copper.

Casement Windows—To insure maximum light and air, steel case windows in single or multiple units with frames as shown on the plan are recommended. All interior windows are to be electrically welded; all mountings to be flush on both interior and exterior faces. Malleable iron or solid bronze hardware to be used. Frames to be anchored with continuous angles. Bronze screens recommended.

BALDWIN REPORTS INVESTOR TREND IN REAL ESTATE

A notable real estate trend for 1923 is to be seen in the growing activity in investment properties, in the opinion of H. C. Baldwin, president and treasurer of McKinney, Morris and Investment company, voiced Saturday in calling attention to the advantages offered investors in the movement.

"The majority of this property has been sold to estate builders, as E. F. Maddox, John W. Grant, Sanders McDaniel, James L. Dickie, R. S. Brandon, Winslow Nunnally and many others. This trend of property lies at the intersection of two prominent thoroughfares in north Fulton county, and has been held intact for many years."

INTEREST SHOWN IN LAKE ROBERTS DEVELOPMENT

Much interest was manifested in the new resort subdivision of Lake Roberts for which development plans are rapidly being brought into final form. The Atlanta Real Estate Salesmen's Association, under the leadership of E. F. Maddox, president, and George J. Morris, vice-president, has organized a committee to be in charge of the work.

The beautiful tract of property is so conveniently located for Atlantans that numerous visitors are taking the trip on week-ends and during the week days. Mr. Burke stated.

The road to Lake Roberts passes the towns of Smyrna, Marietta, Woodstock, Marietta Springs, Canton and Ballground.

BOARD SENDS NEW TOYS TO LEE STREET

The children of the lower grades of Lee Street school are having a very nice time playing with the new toys and fixtures that the board of education sent them.

The children of the kindergarten made May baskets with flowers in them for their mothers.

High-one is busy playing their new games.

High-two has a very pretty border of blue birds and May baskets.

High-one-two won the prize of the ast paper we for the lower grades.

Low-three is playing frogs and has an interesting border on the subject.

Low-four is trying with all its power to beat the south side schools.

The children of low-five are very much interested in the study of tadpoles. They are also enjoying picnics.

The children of high-five are very much interested in their study of South America. They are planning and working on their graduation exercises.

The upgraded class is very proud of the new room they have.

Brandon Tells Of South's First Motor Funeral

One of the most striking changes in the shifting sentiment of mankind lies in its attitude toward funeral proceedings. The invasion of the motor car has brought a complete reversal of attitude toward the solemn rites.

Mr. H. Brandon, head of the firm of Barclay & Brandon, morticians, of 247 Ivy street, N. E., has been in the funeral business for twenty years in Atlanta, and witnessed the evolution. In fact, he was an active leader in it.

Mr. H. Brandon conducted the first motor funeral in the south in 1913. Mr. Brandon said Saturday in commenting on the forty-second anniversary of the Barclay & Brandon company, which is being observed this month, that the motor car had been a great help in the war and created a sharp division of sentiment. One liverman threatened to refuse to allow my company the use of carriages on funeral arrangements. All of us, and whatever the outcome, we try hard to be good sports.

National Forestry week is furnishing us with much interesting material for study.

Eighteen athletic buttons were won in high-six, eight of which were gold.

Students of low-five, low-six and high-six will make talks on forests and their value to the other classes.

High-four students are cutting vases from paper. They are also writing plays, poems, and songs on the subject of trees.

A debate on the subject, "Resolved, that a truck farm is of more value than a large plantation," will be in low-four soon.

The multiplication tables and division are now being studied in high-three.

Low-three has made doll clothes and hats. Fourteen of the students are to become clean-up knights.

May baskets made by high-three students were hung on the doors Tuesday morning.

Low-one made a visit to the corner of Dodd Avenue and Cooper street in order to study a tulip poplar tree.

High-one has a beautiful May calendar on the board.

At Spring Street

Spring Street school May festival was held last Friday.

Students of high-six, of high-five, went to Franklin, N. C. She visited the mines and brought back some souvenirs to show the class.

Mr. Eiler took pictures of high-five students in the woods near the school.

High-four and low-five had a picnic which they enjoyed very much.

High-three is working hard for 100 per cent in health. They hope to have it soon.

Guy King has moved to Chattanooga, Tenn., and is living in a room there.

The children of high-two are working hard to get their health certificates.

Low-one is busy drawing and cutting out birds.

The kindergarten has some new animals.

Public School Music Added to Curriculum Of Summer Semester

A unique feature of the 1923 conference of the Rotary clubs of the thirty-ninth district, to be held May 10 and 11, is the addition of music to the program.

Miss Erma Noss, who is director of music in the public schools of Wimberly Falls, Texas, and who is president of the Wimberly Falls, Texas, will teach for the summer.

Miss Noss already has been announced as the "high spots" of the conference.

The singing, a big feature of every Rotary gathering, will be led by Hamilton Hopkins, of Miami, and the Newell MacLean and Verner clubs to see their double quartets.

Marcel Franck, a Rotary International director from Paris, France, will give one of the principal addresses of the convention. Leonard T. Skeggs, second of the Atlanta club, will speak on the subject of "The Organ in the Organized Church."

John W. Tilden of Orlando, Fla., and Abit Nix, Atlanta, are among the other speakers listed.

Business sessions, at which Bert Arnold, Atlanta district governor, will preside, will be held on both days of the meeting.

Much of relaxation and recreation, however, in the form of golf matches, dances, luncheons, banquets, sight-seeing trips and get-together meetings will be provided.

BENEFIT MUSICAL PROGRAM PLANNED BY AHAVATH ACHIM

Preparations for a benefit performance are to be made by the Sisterhood of the Ahavath Achim, of the Jewish Woman's club next Sunday, May 6, in the ready room of the club.

Eliza M. Morris, president of the Sisterhood, said Saturday that the benefit will be given in the name of the Ahavath Achim.

The benefit will be held in the Ahavath Achim, 1000 Peachtree street, at 8 p. m. The money will be used for the benefit of the Ahavath Achim.

Proceeds of the concert will be appropriated for maintenance of educational activities sponsored by the Ahavath Achim.

32nd Annual Meeting Holds Interest for State Clubwomen

BY BESSIE S. STAFFORD, State Editor.

The thirty-second annual meeting of Georgia Federation of Women's clubs closed a four-day session Friday in the Cavalier hotel in Decatur, the constructive and successful administration of Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, being a well-tilled field from which the products in betterment are altogether visible.

The years have borne full measure of constructive work in the carefully planned undertakings. Her successor, Mrs. A. H. Brenner, sets her presidential regime toward new goals and she will be upheld in the work by the following officers: Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, first vice president; Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, second vice president; Mrs. Alf Otto, of Savannah, secretary; Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, treasurer; Mrs. Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, parliamentarian for life; Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, director for Georgia in general federation. These officers will serve one term of two years, the chairman of each committee through amendment to the constitution, read by Mrs. Price Gilbert, state chairman of revision, a four-year term having been permissible heretofore.

Mrs. Samuel Inman was chairman of tellers, including Mrs. Daniel W. S. Smith, Temple Franklin Miller, of Fort Valley; A. D. McCurry, of Winder; J. W. Scholten, of Comer; S. T. Crappas, of Fort Gaines; and J. M. Hall, of Douglas.

Mrs. Z. Fitzpatrick served as chairwoman of the first vice presidents, of which Mrs. L. C. Warren is secretary, and composing the committee were Mesdames Walter Hodges, of Hartwell; O. B. Warthen, of Vilalda, and the following representatives from 12 congressional districts: Mesdames T. C. Clegg, of Atlanta; Mrs. A. Horn, of Boston; R. E. Lee, of Fitzgerald; H. M. Bird, of Bowdon; A. L. Brumback, of Atlanta; Claude Irby, of Kingston; J. W. Ghosh, of Comer; Hiram Flanagan, of Winder; W. C. Kellogg, of Augusta; W. S. Walker, of Valdosta, and Chester Ryals, of McLemore.

CREDITED HIGH SCHOOL.

The fulfillment of every requirement of the state department of secondary education to become class A, makes Tallulah a certified high school, including all the grades, and all work of state, grammar and high, with a student body of 215, 100 of whom are day pupils and 115 live in the schoolhouse. Mrs. Sam Abrams, president of Fitzgerald club, donated a scholarship of $150; a scholarship amounting to $50 was donated anonymously through Decatur Women's Club by Mrs. S. W. Elkin; a donation of $300 by State Association for Education of Georgia Mountainers and last payment of $500 on the scholarship of Mrs. Mrs. Burford Smith, of Savannah; a gift of $100 on Ellis Mitchell scholarship by Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, president of Washington County federation; the announcement by Mrs. H. D. Ritchie of Athens, that Dr. Stewart Brown, of the Atlanta, had volunteered to visit the school and render considerable aid to the students; and the services of pupils needing special medical attention, made up the list of gifts announced. Over $20,000 was reported in donations by Mrs. John K. Ottler, president of board of trustees for Tallulah, made during the past year.

100 PER CENT.

Seven of the twelve districts of Georgia federation reported 100 percent for Tallulah Industrial school, maintained by state clubwomen, the money wherein the under-privileged children of Georgia are being educated to cope with life in all its phases. Every club made a maintenance gift for the school during the year, and those districts qualifying as 100 per cent included second, fifth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth. The following list includes district presidents and chairmen for Tallulah: First, Mrs. G. M. Barnes, president; Mrs. Inez Wilkins Jones, chairman; second, Mrs. H. H. Perry, president; third, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, president; Miss Victoria Evans, chairman; fourth, Mrs. R. Jones, president; Mrs. H. M. Bird, chairman; fifth, Mrs. E. M. Helbig, chairman; sixth, Mrs. L. A. Collier, president; seventh, Mrs. Alva Moore, chairman; eighth, W. F. Collier, chairman; ninth, Mrs. A. C. Skelton, president; Mrs. John Judson Shaw, chairman; ninth, Mrs. J. E. McElroy, president; Mrs. A. D. McCurry, chairman; tenth, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, president; Mrs. W. B. Smith, chairman; eleventh, Mrs. G. V. Cate, president; Mrs. G. J. Pickens, chairman; twelfth, Mrs. J. C. Mensdon, president; Miss Leah Kittrell, chairman.

Gainesville's Invitation.

The 1928 biennial council will be held at Gainesville, the invitation of the chamber of commerce of the city being read by Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, chairman of time and place, and voted upon unanimously. Mrs. J. D. Parker, a member of the Gainesville Study club, and popular spirit in state organization, gave personal expressions to the invitation. The convention reaffirmed its interest in usage of Georgia products being exhibited by Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Norman Sharp is president, and the first Sunday in each month set aside as "Georgia Products Day."

The fifth district won the prize for stimulation of membership, with a record of six clubs and one affiliated club making a total of 141. Mrs. Kate Green Hess is district president, and Mrs. A. H. Brenner, chairman of extension, presided over the evening session, which also featured the announcements by $25 in gold to the Atlanta City Federation in honor of Mrs. Brenner, and a general federation pin given by Mrs. Alonso Richardson as first and second prizes to the winners in the district extension contests including Mrs. Nichols Peterson, second; third district, Mrs. Nance Cox, Ashburn; fourth district, Mrs. Betty Cobb, Atlanta; fifth district, Mrs. Murry, Mrs. L. FOR MOTHER —on her day

The reverence for the name of Mother should fill our hearts at all times. But once each year we make a visible demonstration of it, and set aside a day in her honor. How much more appropriate are our remembrances when they are substantial and lasting gifts, rather than transient, fragile things which, although they may express sentiment, are powerless to preserve it.

Miss Godwin To Wed
Starling Carpenter
Thursday, June 7

Barnesville, Ga., May 5.—An announcement of cordial interest to a host of friends in that made by Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Watson of Barnesville of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Godwin to Starling Maxwell Carpenter of Newman, Ga., and Neopelt, N. Y.

The marriage will take place at the home of the bride's parents on Thompson street at 5:45 o'clock on the afternoon of June 7.

The bride-elect was graduated in 1926 from the University of Georgia, where she was a popular member of the Chi Omega fraternity. She is the only daughter of Mrs. L. D. Watson, Jr., of Barnesville, and grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Smith and the late Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Godwin, of Valdosta, who were pioneer citizens of that city.

Miss Godwin is possessed of unusual charm and popularity, and has enjoyed wide popularity throughout the south. She is the only sister of Walter M. Godwin of the Tech gridiron fame.

Mr. Carpenter is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Carpenter, of Newman. He is a graduate of Newnan High school and later graduated from Georgia Tech in the class of '28 in civil engineering, where he starred as guard on the Golden Tornado and was a popular member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity and other organizations.

Mr. Carpenter now holds a responsible position with the Turner Construction company, of New York, and is now located at Newport News, Va.

Miss Whiteside Gives

Mrs. W. F. MeltonDeclines Honor
Of Nomination

"Friends in the Atlanta Woman's club have been kind enough to nominate me for the high office of president of the club. I appreciate this and I am grateful for the honor. I am rather fill; but, on the advice of my physician, I would have to decline the office if I were elected. The nomination is a pleasant and my health is improving but I am still unable to go on the ballot. I would not want to be a figure head in any organization."

"I have nothing but the kindest feelings for every member of the club and I wish for the new administration all that the club deserves—the success that has attended former administrations. May I bespeak for the club the hearty cooperation and support of all the members for the coming year. In the language of Tiny Tim, 'God bless us every one.'

"Cordially,
"W. F. MELTON."

Engraved Stationery

It is either correct or incorrect.

A Wedding Invitation or an Announcement should be exactly right in style, material, phraseology and workmanship. The slightest defect may create unfavorable criticism.

Engraving may be good, bad or indifferent the same as any other article, and these days most people are informed and can distinguish the superior from the mediocre.

The engraver who keeps you in a state of uncertainty with an order is never satisfactory. The safest plan is to place your order with a house that has established a reputation for reliability and is an authority in its line.

Fifty years' experience in the engraving field is back of every order placed with us, and is your guarantee that the work will be properly executed. We value the reputation accorded us by our clientele more than the profit on an order.

When interested in Engraved Stationery send for our samples and prices before placing your order. J. P. STEVENS ENGRAVING CO., 103 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.

W.C.T.U. Editor Makes Appeal To Mothers in Splendid Article

By M. Frances Meadows Burghard.

"I thank God for my mother as for no other gift of His bestowing," wrote the great Frances Willard of her mother, "Saint Courageous." This expression of gratitude echoes in the hearts of hundreds of thousands of white ribbons today, each thinking of a different mother.

Organized for "the protection of the home," therefore for "the abolition of the liquor traffic," the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has come to be known as "organized mother love," and its attitude toward motherhood and home is set forth in the following quotations from the pen of the founder of the world's W. C. T. U., Frances E. Willard of blessed memory: "Let us glorify the vocation of motherhood above all others, for the only queen that shall survive is the mother on her rocking-chair throne."

"It is not enough that women should be home-makers but they must make the world itself the larger home. Home is a woman's climate, her vital breath, her native air. A true woman carries home with her everywhere. Its atmosphere surrounds her. Its mirror is her face; its music attunes her gentle voice; its longitude may be reckoned from wherever you happen to find her. Organized motherhood is a tonic, a suggestion, the most deeply rooted, the most soulful endowment this planet knows. Mother love works magic for humanity, but organized mother love works miracles. Mother-hearted women are called to be the saviors of the world."

Today the W. C. T. U. invites mothers and mother-hearted women of the home, the church, the school and of business to become members now, thus rallying to the call of individual responsibility and systematic effort to "abolish the practice of the home, the abolition of the liquor traffic and the triumph of Christ's golden rule in custom and in law."

New Secretary.

Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, of Macon, has been chosen to fill the office of state W. C. T. U. corresponding secretary made vacant by the death of Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus. Mrs. Russell is well known for her charm, culture, consecration, a life long temperance advocate and for 20 years a W. C. T. U. worker. The daughter of the late Captain and Mrs. Dunlap Scott, of Rome, where she spent her girlhood. Her father was a lawyer of great ability, having fought for Lee's army in Virginia, and was a legislative leader in the troublous reconstruction days.

She was educated in the Atlanta Girls' High School, where she graduated with second honor, was the first

Many Social Affairs Take Place Today

The first Sunday in May will be filled with a round of informal and delightful affairs, which would suggest that May is conducive to gaiety and charm. The handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rhodes on Pace's Ferry road, will be the scene of the midday dinner, with which this Atlanta couple will compliment Miss Alice Stearns and Count Bernard de Sleyes, of Les Sleyes, France, whose marriage will be a forthcoming event of wide social interest.

Honoring their son, William Thomson, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Thomson will be hosts Sunday evening at a delightful buffet supper at their home on North Decatur road. More than 60 guests have been invited.

One of the most novel and enjoyable affairs of the day will be the informal reception with which Mr. and Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright will entertain members and friends of the Emory Glee club at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue from 6 to 8 o'clock. The soloist of the club will sing several of the favorite numbers and the entire club will sing its most popular negro spirituals for the enjoyment of the large assemblage of guests. Byron Warner, who will appear with the orchestra May 18th, will give a farewell Atlanta concert, will sing several selections from his operatic repertoire.

A gathering of a more intimate nature will be the party, including members of the family and close friends, at which Dr. E. L. Connally will be honored Sunday marking the ninety-first birthday of this pioneer and beloved Atlanta resident. Dr. Connally is the oldest living alumnus of the medical school of our university, he served as a surgeon in the Confederate Army, and since that time has been in the forefront of almost every forward movement for the betterment of social and civic conditions in the city.

The exciting polo game played between Fort McPherson and the Governor's Horse Guard this afternoon on the polo field at Fort McPherson will draw several hundred members of civilian and army society. Members of Atlanta's 1927-28 Debutante club will be spectators of this occasion, as well as at the tea at the Fort McPherson Officers' club which will follow the game.

A municipal concert this evening in the city auditorium, featuring Charles Sheldon, city organist, marks the opening event of Atlanta's observance of National Music week May 6-12.

Haverty Canvases

On View at High.

Outstanding canvases from the collection of J. J. Haverty in the collection in the exhibition now being sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's club, at the High Museum of Art.

Mr. Haverty is one of the few collectors who possesses the faculty of knowing true art value in pictures. As a result his collection, chosen with a discriminating eye, is one of the finest in the south. The canvases now on view at the High museum, together with the collection of china and silver, includes a Hawthorne, Eugene Higgins, Johnson, Carson and an intriguing early American portrait but recently acquired.

Museum hours are from 10 until 5 o'clock daily and from 2 to 6 o'clock Sundays. The present exhibition will run through Sunday.

Mrs. Kinard Returns Home After Visit.

Mrs. W. P. B. Kinard, of Greenwood, S. C., who is one of the popular visitors to opera each year, returned home Friday after being the guest of Mrs. John D. and Mrs. John J. Mcintosh Burnet. Mrs. Kinard was the honor guest at a series of lovely entertainments during her stay here, Mrs. Tillman entertaining informally at a spend-the-day party Wednesday.

Miss Burnett Is Feted Bride Elect.

Miss Charlotte Burnett, bride-elect whose marriage to Brower Thomas will be an event of May 12, is being honored at a number of prenuptial parties.

Misses Frances and Kathryn Craighead entertain at a luncheon Thursday, May 10, at their home on North Decatur road, honoring this charming bride-elect.

Mrs. R. A. Burnett entertains at dinner honoring the Burnett-Thomases wedding party Friday evening, May 11, following the wedding rehearsal.

Mrs. Coursey Honors Miss Carmichael.

Mrs. Vernon Coursey was hostess Saturday at a matinee party at the Howard theater in compliment to Miss Alice Carmichael, a new bride-elect. The guests included Misses Louise Brewer, Enola Eiford, Irene Colwell, Dorothy Spratt, Katherine Lott, Peggy Whithill and Dorothy Fluker.

Dr. and Mrs. Alsobrook Honored by Miss Brown.

Miss Mary Brown was hostess at a bridge and dinner party Saturday evening at her home on Adams street in Decatur, in honor of Dr. and Mrs. James Alsobrook and a new bride-elect. The guests included Misses Louise Brewer, Enola Eiford, Irene Colwell, Dorothy Spratt, Katherine Lott, Peggy Whithill and Dorothy Fluker.

Miss Carmichael.

Miss Carmichael.

The "Follies" will be given by the junior division of the Jewish Woman's club Tuesday evening, May 8, at 8:30 o'clock at the clubhouse, Washington and Clark streets.

The "Follies" will include a beautiful junior fashion show, featuring the latest styles in misses clothes from M. Rich & Bros. Co. The "Follies" will be: Misses Vivian Franklin, Sophie Newcomb, Bessie Lillian, Freda Freedman, Agnes Nissenbaum, Ada Galanta, Elsie Lichtenstein, Helen Balser, Beatrice Schriener and Bessie Lee Rose. Earl Blackwell is stage director and coach for the "Follies."

St. Catherine's Guild To Sponsor Party.

St. Catherine's Guild of St. Luke's church sponsors a benefit bridge party this afternoon, May 14, at the home of Mrs. John M. Stalon on Peachtree road. Tickets are 50 cents each, or two dollars a table. The table reservations are in charge of Miss Elvina Da Grafton. Walnut 6522.

TO STEER JUNIOR LEAGUE ACTIVITIES FOR ENSUING YEAR

Mississippi Belle To Wed Henry Jackson in June

Bearing great social import throughout the southern states is the announcement made today of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Virginia Louise Clark, of Clarkdale, Miss., to Henry Jackson, of Atlanta.

Miss Clark, the lovely young daughter of Mrs. Clark, is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, the founders of Clarkdale, and the late Judge Samuel Poll Walker, of Memphis, and Mrs. Walker who was the daughter of Colonel Daniel K. Jackson, of North Carolina.

The bride-elect attended Sophie Newcomb college and Chateau de Grouvelay in Paris, France. She made her debut in Memphis, Tenn., in 1925-26 and is a member of the Colliton club of Memphis. She is a member of the Atlanta Y.W.C.A. and the Atlanta Y.M.C.A.

Special musical numbers are being prepared by Mrs. Harold Coolidge to amuse the children during the intermission. This will be an especially attractive feature.

Junior League Players Present Children's Play on May 17

Junior League Players are rehearsing Mrs. George Street; music, Mrs. Harold Coolidge. The purpose of the play is to afford the children's entertainment for children of kindergarten and school ages, and to create an interest among young children and their parents for the educational and cultural side of the stage.

Mrs. Glenn Ryman, chairman of the play, has announced that nurses escorting children will be welcome and seated with the children in a special section. The admission price will be no reserved seats. Box seats will be the same price as all others.

Special musical numbers are being prepared by Mrs. Harold Coolidge to amuse the children during the intermission. This will be an especially attractive feature.

Shearith Israel Sisterhood

To Give Benefit Bridge

Shearith Israel Sisterhood will sponsor a benefit bridge Monday, May 14, at 8 o'clock at the Jewish Woman's club on Washington street. This marks the third annual bridge to be given by the sisterhood. Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Paul Wilson, Remlock 7053-J.

Centering the cordial interest of a wide circle of friends throughout the south is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Charlotte Corday Rice and Hugh Pendleton Nunnally, the marriage to be brilliantly solemnized at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening, June 2, at the First Presbyterian church.

The Rev. Dr. J. Sprule Lyons, pastor of the church, will read the marriage service in the presence of a representative assemblage of southern society.

Miss Rice has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Elizabeth Putnam, of Orlando, Fla. Acting as bridesmaids will be Misses Martha Bell, Edythe Coleman, Ethel Hunter and Lucy Elizabeth Harper. The lovely bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, John W. Rice. Rev. Dr. J. Sprule Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate. The groomsmen include Burwell

Nolan of Marietta; Edward Wallace, brother of the bride-to-be, and Ruth

Miss Battey, Of Rome, Weds Richard Long

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Harriett Battey, of Rome, Ga., and Richard Long, of Atlanta, is of cordial interest to wide circle of friends, both of the young people and those of their families.

Miss Battey is the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Harry Battey and Mrs. Gerry Battey. She has exceptional personal charms and beauty. Her mother was formerly Miss Lila Gerry, of Macon, and her maternal grandmother, for whom she was named, was the popular Hattie Ward Gerry, of Macon. Her maternal grandfather, the late Judge M. B. Gerry, was a native of Florida, who for many years resided in Denver, Colo., where he served as a justice of the peace and on the court of appeals. Her great-grandmother was Mrs. Eliza Dibble Ward, and the family is prominently connected throughout the New England states.

The bride-elect's paternal grandfather was the celebrated and beloved Dr. Robert Battey, of Rome, who enjoyed an international reputation as a surgeon. His paternal grandmother was Miss Martha Smith, his model for her wit, charm and individuality.

Miss Battey for a number of years has spent the summer months at Monroe, Ala., where she was popular with the younger set. Her unused beauty and charm have won her an enviable place in the heart of a host of friends throughout the south. She is the sister of Miss Henry Battey, Mrs. Chester A. Stephens, Chattooga; Mrs. Asher Ayres, Charlotte, N. C., and Mrs. Kenneth Stewart, Atlanta.

Mr. Long is a native of Indianapolis, Ind. He has made his home in Atlanta for the past 15 years and is a member of the firm of John A. Long, which operates two stores in Atlanta, and a number of stores in the southeast and middle west. He is a member of the Piedmont Driving club, Capital City club and the Atlanta Athletic club.

The marriage will be quietly solemnized during the summer, the exact date to be announced later.

Atlanta Belles Will Represent City at Reunion

Much interest centers in the Confederate veterans' reunion which will be held in Little Rock, Ark., May 8-12, as Atlanta will be represented by a trio of attractive belles.

Miss Yvonne Gwin will represent for the John Gwin camp and will have as her mates Misses Turman and Miss Therese Newton.

Miss Florence Eckford will represent Georgia for the Army of Tennessee, Sons of Veterans, John B. Gordon, and John Ashley Jones is commander-in-chief.

These representatives are descended from some of the most gallant soldiers who fought for the Confederacy.

The paternal grandfather of Miss Gwin is Charles C. Clegg, of Mobile, Ala., lieutenant of the fortieth Alabama regiment. Her maternal grandfather was William Sears Clegg, of Boston, Mass., whose sympathies were with the south and who also fought in the fortieth Alabama regiment of Mobile. He was adjutant of Raphael Simms camp in Mobile for many years.

Miss Turman is the granddaughter of Col. John T. Turman Reed, who commanded the first Georgia regiment and on her paternal side she is the granddaughter of Lieutenant W. R. Turman.

Miss Eckford is the granddaughter of Captain Joseph Eckford of the Mississippi regiment. Her maternal grandfather was John Augustus Burgess, of the army of Virginia.

Garden Committee To Meet Tuesday.

The garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will meet Tuesday, May 8, at the home of Mrs. J. M. Royall, 130 Superior Avenue, Decatur. Mrs. Royall invited the committee to be her guests at this time. Mrs. Frist, Jones and present. This will be a delightful program planned by Mrs. Royall on "The Small Garden."

Miss May Hudson, a member of the committee, was one of the judges at the Thomasville rose show, and she will give an account of the show from the viewpoint of a judge and will name some of the prize winning and new varieties of roses exhibited.

The meeting will be opened at 10:30 o'clock. It would be appreciated if members with extra seats in their cars, who live in the locality of the Woman's club, would stop by the house and take out with them those members who have no cars. Those visitors interested in the garden programs are welcome to attend the garden committee meetings held at the Woman's club upon payment of a small fee, when meetings are held at the same time visitors cannot be accommodated. Members, however, may bring guests.

At the last meeting of the committee the members voted to change the date to the second and fourth Tuesdays in the month instead of the second and fourth Thursdays as formerly.

Woman's Auxiliary Plans Birthday Party.

The birthday party of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Central Presbyterian church will be held at their regular monthly meeting Monday afternoon, May 7, at 3:30 o'clock at the church.

Miss Nellie Beattie, president of the auxiliary, will preside and the meeting will be opened with a devotional by Mrs. W. R. Heston. The program will present a pageant, "Ethiopia," and spirituals rendered by Rev. G. C. Clegg and a group of singers from the Pittsburgh mission.

An offering will be taken which will be devoted to establishing a training school at Stillman Institute. The proceeds will be used for the purpose of giving negro girls a practical course in the principles of health, sanitation and the care of children. After the program a social hour will be enjoyed.

Mrs. Mueller Will Present Pupils.

Mrs. Kure Mueller will present a group of her artist-students in a program of music and singing on May 8 at Eggleston Memorial hall, corner West Peachtree and North Avenue, Thursday evening, May 10, at 8:30 p.m. The program will consist of many beautiful solo numbers and duets. Those taking part are Mrs. Earl Davis, Miss Greta Mueller, Mrs. Edwin Payne, Miss Sybil Deyers, Thomas Mell, James L. Mayson, Louis Murray, Croom Partridge and E. W. Wilson.

Newly-Elected State P.-T. A. President Issues First Message

Another chapter of Parent-Teacher progress is about to be recorded; newly elected officers—be they state, district, or local—have much to consider as they assume the responsibilities so effectively and so ably carried by their predecessors. Our Georgia congress, which wields unmeasured influence upon the opportunities and development of education in the state, is a mighty power, and it must be handled with the composite wisdom of all its officers, and supplemented by the conscientious advice of all its great leaders.

As with the successful parent so with the influential Parent-Teacher association, there is no vacation; schools may close; children may put away their books; teachers may seek other stimulation, but the family—the community—still works and plays; eats and sleeps; and its problems are continuous. Therefore, through officers and committees let all our Parent-Teacher organizations continue to function through the summer.

To make the summer round-up campaign effective "follow up" work must be organized so that vaccinations may be completed; corrective work may be accomplished and the toxin anti-toxin treatment given which will render inoculation effective before the deadly diphtheria season comes early fall.

During the pleasant summer weather pre-school circles should flourish for the mother may then leave the home in care of older children while she attends a meeting or visits the baby clinic, which is very essential during the dangerous hot months.

Community spirit of cooperation, so necessary to progress, can be stimulated through the social pleasures of picnics, twilight camp fires and summer concerts.

The working machinery of every Parent-Teacher association is its executive board. Every president should see that this board is completely organized, standing committees appointed, plans and programs approved, and every detail in readiness so when school opens in September the P.-T. A. shall be literate, standing in the forefront with welcome, and be ready to receive children and teachers. "Parent-Teacher" need should be anticipated, the "first aid" cabinet in order; funds available to supply books and clothes for the under-privileged; incidental supplies on hand, and if a new superintendent or new teachers are to be installed a public reception should be arranged. All this will go far to establish a bond of partnership and sympathy between the school and the patrons, and it is also a practical demonstration of P.-T. A. efficiency.

In organizing the standing committees every association is urged to appoint able department chairmen for public welfare, education, home service and health—through these four super-departments the real benefits for the school and the community are obtained.

So, the newly elected, of state or local, are filled with pride and appreciate fully the high honor conferred, and are equally appreciative of the great responsibility of holding this first and vital force. Let us, however, through the conscientious cooperation of those who elected us that progress can be made; it is not only officers but the active members who are needed to carry forward the ideals of democracy, through the instrumentality of the Georgia congress of parents and teachers and its local associations.

I. N. Ragsdale Pi Epsilon Sorority P.-T. A. Celebrates Plans Formal Dance Sutton Night At East Lake Club

"Sutton Night," held by the P.-T. A. of the I. N. Ragsdale school Wednesday evening, was attended by several hundred interested parents and friends of the association. Mr. Sutton, who has done so much to further education in the schools of Atlanta, was speaker of the evening and chose for his subject, "Character Building," which gave helpful advice in this prime factor in the life of the child.

Mrs. David E. Barnett made her yearly report for 1927-28 which showed continued progress of the association and a successful year of activities.

Announcement was made of the benefit bridge to be held May 17 at Fort McPherson at 2:30 o'clock at the Officers' club. Tickets may be secured from Mrs. Robert H. Peck, Arlington Avenue, or Mrs. John H. Hulman Hester, Fort McPherson, for 50 cents each or two for $2.

Miss Hurst's class won first place in the event of parents present, Miss Williams second and Miss New, third.

Brenau College News Is of Interest.

Dr. H. J. Pearce, president of the college, returned this week from a visit to eastern cities. When in New York he entertained the Atlanta chapter at the Wentworth Hotel, at which a number of former students were present. The invitation extended also to the known Broadway play, "The Freer Doer," in which Mrs. Pearce's son, Dr. Margaret Galliard of Gainesville, has an important role.

The Glee club gave its second performance in Binford Monday evening, and it was received very enthusiastically. Dr. Pearce, who has been instrumental in the success in welding the club into a homogeneous whole and the showing of "Plautus" has been a decided success.

Thursday afternoon Grace Jean Salls presented in Binford "Old Land," by Rachel Crothers. It was a delightful play, especially gifted in dealing with characters as are portrayed in this interesting comedy.

Dr. E. Edwards, professor of psychology at the University of Georgia, spoke interestingly on "The Psychology of Religion" at the regular Thursday chapel convocation. Lent Green presented Grace Reid, and Constance Reid, and the "Lightning" Monday, Miss Reid's interpretation of "Lightning," the terrible, shifting medicine gave me splendid results. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation also and recommend these medicines to my friends and will answer letters asking for information.—Mrs. Gladys Rogers, Route 5, Grand Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia.

A Lot Better By Taking It

Truro, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I could not eat a thing; I had no appetite whatever and never felt good. I was talking to my friend one day and she passed the remark that I was getting fat since I got married. I told her my trouble and she advised me to take the Vegetable Compound. I feel a lot better now since I have been taking it regularly and I can eat most anything. I recommend your medicine to anyone who tells me of troubles like my own, for I know what it has done for me. I have also used your Sanative Wash. I am willing to answer women if they ask about the medicine."—Mrs. E. GELICK, Box 502, Truro, Pa.

Decatur Hi P.-T. A. P.-T. A. Council Will Elect Officers at June Meeting

Closes Successful Year of Activities

Mrs. T. M. Fulton, county probation officer, made an appeal for aid for certain families in the county before the members of the Decatur high P.-T. A. Wednesday afternoon, May 3. Mrs. Fulton's talk was received with enthusiasm and help was promised by the members present.

Mrs. Alvin Stanton, chairman of the legislative committee, gave an interesting talk.

Mrs. W. H. Bowman, president of the club, called on the chairman of the committees for reports. Mrs. Brown Hays, chairman of yard committee, reported that eight benches had recently been placed in the front yard and additional shrubbery and posts and chains for its protection had been added.

Mrs. John Roberts, chairman of finance, gave a very encouraging report.

Katherine Bowen, president of the girl reserve, made an appeal for aid in sending one of its members to conference at Brevard, N. C., and also for a page in the annual.

The new officers should be anticipated, the "first aid" cabinet in order; funds available to supply books and clothes for the under-privileged; incidental supplies on hand, and if a new superintendent or new teachers are to be installed a public reception should be arranged. All this will go far to establish a bond of partnership and sympathy between the school and the patrons, and it is also a practical demonstration of P.-T. A. efficiency.

OUT at the High Museum, amid plaster casts, still life studies and an artistic conglomeration of colors, easels and designs, old and young, boys and girls are working out their innate feeling for art. Those who have had a little training and those who have had none are enjoying the thrill of creating and experimenting in terms of charcoal and color.

With an interest that takes them to the museum for three hours or more every day besides two weekly classes, Atlanta society girls are making great progress as youthful art students. Parties, clubs and the customary activities of the social bud are relegated to second place in view of the enthusiasm for art. Numbers are devoting their entire time with the exception of a few hours spared for lessons in French. With a bit of guidance here, a stroke there, and the necessary instruction in the essentials of drawing, Miss Cornelius Cunningham, instructor, who has studied at the Woman's Art school, the Grand Central Art school and the National Academy of Design, New York, is taking these Atlanta belles along with rapid strides.

Miss Helena Callaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Callaway, who has been studying a year, is taking the course in commercial art, as well as doing work in the life class. She has become so enamored of the art that she supplements her work at the museum with a night class at the Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Marilee Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Bennett, expects to be a portrait painter, but in the meantime is perfecting herself in commercial design. Her fascination makes her wonder who in the world isn't studying art.

"The work is really informal, and we give a great deal of time to it outside of classes," declared Miss Myra Boynton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Boynton, on Habersham road. "Soon we expect to take some book, any that we like, draw the cover design and the illustrations throughout."

Miss Susan Broyles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Broyles; Miss Boyce Lokey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Lokey, are among the other attractive Atlanta girls who are spending their time and talents at the High Museum.

TWO Atlanta women, and an English chauffeur, on a bright sunny afternoon last summer were touring nearly tramped countryside near Bath, England, and were enjoying the quiet hedges, the spreading trees and the tip of a church spire here and there above the trees. But the chauffeur was an Englishman, whose taste for tea halted the enterprising American in her tracks. And him here in front of a wayside cafe. One of the Atlanta women during the wait strolled down the road to a cottage where she purchased an exquisitely modeled group of figurines, the chauffeur and his wife.

These may be seen at the High Museum of Art, where a splendid loan exhibition is being viewed by the Atlanta public. It is the property of Mrs. Samuel Porter, who considers it one of the very rare collection. Her traveling companion, the wayside jaunt was Mrs. Ulrie Atkinson, who enjoyed with her a very delightful tour of England at this time. The exhibition continues through Sunday.

A CHARMING young matron of Atlanta's exclusive ranks, an erstwhile equally charming young divorcee, was giving a party! Elaborate preparations were being forwarded, the party, which she and as hostess are always something of an event. Of such proportions was this particular one, that one hundred members of the younger married contingent had been invited to luncheon, which was to be held in the handsome home of the hostess on a fashionable boulevard.

An intimate friend, another popular member of the city's young matron set, whose creed never omits lending a helping hand whenever and wherever possible, was invited to luncheon with the hostess on the day of the party and proffered the use of any or all of her extensive collection of silver or china.

"Thank you very much, my dear. You are very kind and thoughtful, however, the favors I have given you, but I don't believe I'll need a thing. You see I have two sets of wedding presents to draw from."

INTERESTING indeed will be that part of the historical pageant staged at Washington seminar May 18 in celebration of the seminary's fiftieth anniversary where members of the alumnae association will be seen wearing their graduation dresses or replicas, which never-forgetting costumes. Sweet girl graduates of the golden days will march in the great pageant procession with their attractive daughters and granddaughters, who are students at a fashionable school recently located in the generation of southern womanhood.

The pageant will open with the entrance of Education, portrayed by beautiful Miss Julia Meador, senior seminary, leading a company of 1878, the year in which Washington seminary was founded. She will be attended by little Misses Margaret Hanes and Beverly Evans, who will represent Industry and Interest.

Members of the senior class will assume the role of Progress and will be accompanied by Good Will and Love in the tiny forms of little Misses Sarah Hopkins and Anna Darzau.

Friendship, which is the life of the student body at the seminary, will be delineated by Miss Hazel Stamps, who will be awarded a diploma this month.

Psyche, Aurora and Iris will be represented by Misses Sarah Sharp, Mary Morrison and Myrtle Corker, respectively.

The brilliant and colorful pageant will close with the crowning of Progress and Education by the Spirit of the Washington Seminary, which honor has been bestowed upon Miss Cornelius Orman, popular member of the senior class of 1928.

THE latest black cat story to reach Atlanta was told by Mrs. W. E. Lamar, of Monroe, as an excuse for arriving late at the session of Georgia Federation in Declarer last week. But, for the fact that Mrs. Lamar is a descendant of the late James H. Blount, a man of unquestioned integrity, who, it is said, by the late President Grover Cleveland to go to the Hawaiian Islands to report the truth concerning the 1868 revolution, this story might be doubted by the reader.

Mrs. Blount's automobile left Monroe in ample time to reach Atlanta as motoring along the concrete highway connecting the cities requires but a short two hours. Several miles out of town, of course attracted my attention, the sound of a plaintive meow being heard at intervals. The machine came to a stop, but the investigation proved to no avail. Mrs. Lamar determined at a given point along the road to make a thorough investigation, calling into service expert mechanics and when certain parts of the machinery were removed, there sat a terrified black cat, the universally acknowledged enemy of bad luck, occupying a perilous position in the grease box.

"THIS, too, passeth away," So said the ancient philosopher.

Miss Kops Heard In Violin Recital.

The violin recital of Miss Jane de Bruyn Kops, assisted by Miss Dorothy Collier, pianist, was an event of Friday evening, in the studio parlors of Miss Marguerite Cooper, their instructor. A large circle of friends and students showed cordial appreciation of these young artists, both of whom are popular students of Washington University, Miss Kops graduating this month.

Miss Kops played the Handel sonata, which give scope for unusual tonal work and power of execution. The Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria" was exquisitely played, the strings gave especial pleasure and ennobled the program was Piltz's "Petit Reverie," Barns' "Swing Song" and Ernst's "Gypsy Dance." Miss Kops is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian de Bruyn Kops of Atlanta, Georgia, and the mother of Miss Rose Wessinger.

Miss Collier, assisting Miss Kops, played Beethoven's "Waldesnacht." Other interesting piano numbers that she gave were Grimes' "Corpuscula" and Chopin's "E Major."

Miss Converse, of Valdosta, To Wed Prominent New Yorker

Southern and eastern society will be interested in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Erastus Davis, of Valdosta, Ga., of the engagement of their sister, Catherine Converse, to John Carter Herndon, of New York city, the marriage to be a fashionable event of June. Miss Converse is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Converse, of Valdosta, and is a representative of distinguished and aristocratic southern families. On her paternal side, she is a member of the Monroe family of Virginia, being named for her great-grandmother, Catherine Monroe, who was a direct descendant of James Monroe. Miss Converse attended the fashionable Miss Finch's school for girls in New York and Versailles, France. She has enjoyed wide popularity in southern society and is well known in Atlanta's social realms, where she has often visited Miss Mary Armstrong, popular Atlanta belle.

Mr. Herndon is the son of Mrs. Dixon on Boardman, of 330 Park avenue, New York, and belongs to important families in the east and is a member of the New York's highest social circles. Mr. Herndon is a graduate of Princeton and is connected with the Seaboard National bank, of New York.

Character In Silver

In the various patterns of Sterling or Solid Silver that we carry great care has been taken in the selection of design so that the artistic and the practical are properly combined. This is of especial value when you stop to think that Sterling Silver is practically everlasting, making it very necessary that the design be one that will appeal more and more as the years go by.

Have been made for this sale. Reductions that will mean genuine savings to you will prevail on every article, whether it be a most elaborate suite or the smallest "odd piece." Reductions such as these are unusual, as this is NOT a clearance of old, shop-worn or out of date furniture, but special reductions on the very newest designs that are still fresh from the markets. If you are considering the purchase of furniture, by all means make it a point to attend this sale. Remember, when we opened this store we made a faithful promise that at all times we would offer only the newest, the most up-to-date furniture, and at all times our prices would be the lowest possible.

For the Dining Room

One solid floor of this huge store is devoted entirely to the display of Dining Room Furniture, and on this floor you are sure to find just the suite of your dreams. There is a selection of suites best fitted for every dining room, ranging from the small "Dinettes" Suites to the most elaborate, massive suites for the large home. You will find every desired wood, every new decorative touch, every new finish. In fact, nothing has been overlooked in order to make this the most complete department not only in Atlanta, but in the South. During this great May Sale of Furniture you will find Dining Room Suites ranging in price from

$98.50 to $975.00

For the Bedroom

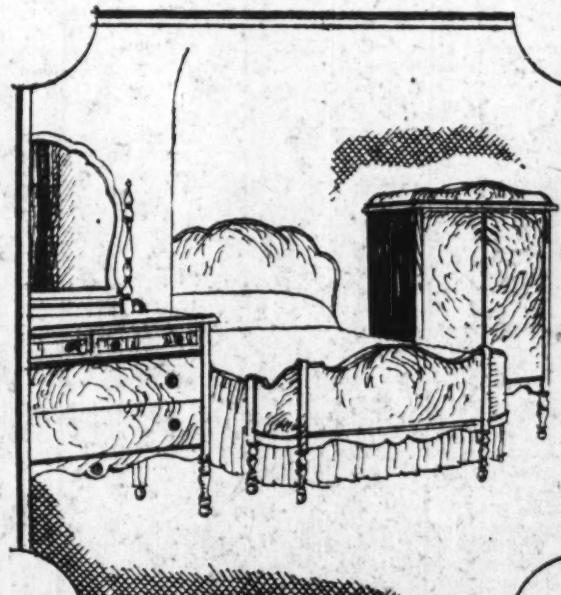

The proper selection of furniture for the bed-room combines more necessities than for any other room in the House, as in no other part of the home is the demand for "comfort" more pressing than the bed room. Here you will find another floor in this huge store devoted entirely to the display of Bedroom Furniture where not only "types" and finishes are brought out to the best advantage but every element of Comfort is given serious consideration.

Come in tomorrow and let us show you this wonderful selection of Bed Room Furniture. You are sure to find not only the suite best for your home, but the prices will be most pleasing. Bed Room Suites during our great May Sale of Furniture are priced from

$62.50 to $575.00

Convenient Terms

Not only can you take advantage of big savings during this sale, but you can make any purchase on our convenient credit terms.

For the Living Room

The real "Heart" of the Home is the Living Room, and too much care cannot be given to the proper furnishings for this all-important room, BUT here it is possible for you to make selections from quality furniture that not only adds charm to your home, but of such quality that its usefulness will continue for many, many years to come. Living Room Suites of wood frame or of solid overstuffed—the deep, restive cushions—the upholstering in selections ranging from the bright Jacquot Velours to the most expensive Frieze. During this great May Sale of Furniture you will find Living Room Suites ranging in price from Character--The God of Life.

To form a character is the work of our personal life. When once we see this, the inequalities of our outward circumstances cease to be startling.

If wealth or fame or knowledge, or length of days were the final goal of human endeavor, then, indeed, the difference between man and man would be an unspeakable injustice.

The highest service may be prepared for and done in the humblest surroundings.

In silence, in waiting, in obscure, unnoticed offices—in years of uneventful, unrecorded duties, the Son of God grew and waxed strong.

Official Route Is Announced To Baptist W.M.U. Convention

Chattanooga, the convention city of the Southern Baptists, May 14-20, will welcome not only the general convention but the Woman's Misionary Union, which was organized in Richmond, Va., May, 1888, and is celebrating its twentieth anniversary. "Ruby anniversary" meeting. An unusually large number will attend this convention, and all will find Chattanooga has many first-class hotels, which will be filled overflowing, but the charm of the hospital committee, Dr. B. Merriman, assures that all who come, even at the last moment, will be satisfactorily located.

The N. C. & S. L. the official route for those traveling by U. S. mail, operates trains daily to Chattanooga at 12:30 p. m., and another, the Dixie Limited, leaving at 6:30 p. m., reaching Chattanooga at 10:30 p. m.

Those wishing to attend the opening session of W. M. U. Monday evening, May 14, will leave on N. C. & S. L. at 8 a. m. and thus afford themselves time for rest or sight seeing before the first evening meeting.

ATLANTA'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do

This is the 27th of a series of articles on the Atlanta public school system, prepared under the direction of the Personnel association of Atlanta. They are published with the view of informing the public about the schools and their work. The entire system will be discussed.

Physical Education for Girls in Junior High Schools.

Before setting forth the advantages of physical training in the junior high schools, let us review briefly the changes that time has wrought in our schools.

When the system of public schools was first established about 85 per cent of the people in the United States lived in the country or in small villages. Outdoor life, hunting, fishing, wandering over fields and streams gave plenty of outdoor recreation. The playgrounds and opportunities for social activities, for reading and studying, was the prime factor in the establishment of schools and colleges.

These first schools had session lasting from two to six months a year. The pupils, however, in the larger cities, the schools grew in nine months with prospect of 12; the things that were lacking in the earlier life were later supplied in abundance, what became of the woods and the streams and the adopted life? It is for these things physical training, playground, school and college sports have been offered as substitutes. And the great test of opportunity for offering these play substitutes is found in the junior high schools where the child mind is so receptive to play atmosphere.

Playground Is Success.

The supervised playground, so long a matter of criticism, has been found to succeed for the following reasons:

1. The playground allows children to play at the same time without interference, and a greater variety of games can be taught, so that each child will find something to bring out his individuality. The games taught to play automatically and each one given a square deal. Fair play is made a life slogan. Our greatest difficulty in the future will be providing enough land. The National Education association declares that every school ground should have at least a square rod of space for each

In the New York Theaters

BY PERCY HAMMOND

New York, May 4.—The Waves of Broadway have washed the name of Richard Mansfield from the facade of the erstwhile Mansfield theater and that playhouse is now to be distinguished from others by the sign "The Empire." The name is retained by the erasings, find comfort in the new device; for the Fields' tragi-comedy is a worthy one, and perhaps more befitting than its predecessor. Since Mr. Fields himself has been a penniless lodger from the drama flings, it goes without the substitution with an understanding reluctance. While the electric lights describe it as "Lew Fields' Theater," the programs and advertisements call it "The Fields' Mansfield Theater." In the change a few sentimental playgoers discover another evidence that in show-business, just as in more phlegmatic spheres, life is like grass.

"Worried Fame; and Forgetfulness grows like grass."

To be thus suspected of a general coma concerning the great persons of its past, show-business suffers an undeserved hardship. In New York alone, to say nothing of the rest of the realm, the numerous theaters wear the necessary colors of remembrance. Even if the symbol "Mansfield" is vanishing, temporarily, dozens of others are present to disprove the drama's reputation for marble tombs. The surviving theatrical management roosters reveal that prophets are not without honor even in this lukewarm hinterland; and that there are prominently enshrined here and there its gayest thoroughfares.

Mansfield is demoted, but we still have theaters named for Edwin Booth, Martin Beck, David Garrick, Julian Eltinge, Oscar Hammerstein, Henry Miller, John Barrymore, George M. Cohan, Augustus Daly and Edyth M. Totten. Miss Maxine Elliott is recalled from a luxurious oblivion by a playhouse inscribed to her, and you can kneel in cathedrals entitled to the names of Eliza, Mrs. John Broadhurst, the Belasco, the Morosco and the Apollo. There is an Al Jolson, an Earle Carroll, a Selwyn, a John Golden, a Charles H. Hopkins and most appropriate of all, the Alvin.

Nonetheless, room should be made somewhere for Mr. Mansfield's signature to a temple dedicated to the art which, once upon a time, he was a master. As I look over the list of set names, the name of the man is transferred from their inventories to prominent headquarters of the drama. Perhaps Ritz, Astor, Vanderbilt, Waldorf, Belmont or other bonifaces for whom New York playhouses have been christened, will be in the ascendancy in favor of Mr. Mansfield. He would appreciate it so deeply. However, I guess that within a year or two they will be numbering New York theaters as they do automobiles, and that what is now known as the Ambassador of the Empire will bear a plate describing it merely as N.Y.C.—1901-1001. Which will be enough.

Mr. Field's new product, "Present

Why Greenely Island Was a Difficult Assignment

Washington, D. C.—Why Greenely Island was the most difficult assignment reporters and news photographers have had in years?

It's a fact that Greenely Island is nearly as much of a feat for the rescue planes to fly to Greenely Island as for the Bremen to fly the ocean?

"Hundreds of questions have arisen which can only be answered by a study of the geography of the Gulf of Lawrence, the sea between the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic, the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

Still Far From Goal.

"The gulf is a bay of magnificence distances. A plane to carry supplies to Greenely Island must fly from New York to a non-stop flight from New York to Miami, Fla.

"There is a little community in the United States that is as far away from a railroad as the fliers' landing place. A Greenely Island resident must go 655 miles to Murray bay to take a train.

"The dramatic isolation of the

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

TRAGEDY IN THE MEDICINE CUPBOARD.

From the patrons of bawd and boot-leggers and politicians exploiting both we have heard a great deal of impounded criticism of the government's practice of denaturating alcohol with methyl alcohol, a deadly poison.

It is the same old story again to manifestly cause the death of innocent persons by any of these coal-tar derivatives. Sometimes sensitive persons suffer acute depression with cyanosis from even a small dose of such poison.

It is strange in a way, though logical enough when we consider the character of our government, that anybody may purchase at nearly the price of pure alcohol, methyl alcohol, which very likely causes death.

"Now I should mingle my voice with the rancorous hue and cry of these广播ed people who temporarily reside within the walls of this great free country. The government is not to manifest pains to conceal the fact that the poisonous denaturing agent is used and especially if the government encouraged the sale to the public of such dangerous poisons.

"The introduction of acetanilide and other pain-killing drugs into the market was a great advance and a great blessing, for it placed in the hands of the physician a means of relieving pain without subjecting the patient to narcotics or opium.

"In the hands of the physician acetanilide and its congeners are still a great blessing. But these drugs are unsafe for promiscuous use, and a menace to life itself when employed in large doses.

"The introduction of acetanilide was a tragedy in which our federal government played a sorry role, and to my mind the sad part of it is to try to play upon the good faith of the government in the capacity of guardian where a question of business profit is concerned.

"Completely re-educated so that it ranks with the finest of de luxe theaters, the Rialto theater brings to Atlanta a thrill that will sound around the whole city the week is coming.

"The new Vitaphone installed at the Rialto is the latest and most costly Bringing a new and great sensation to Atlanta theatergoers, the Rialto theater, under the direction of Manager W. T. Murray, after remaining closed for two weeks for remodeling and installation of vitaphone and movietone apparatus, will reopen Monday with the superlative "The Magic Flame," starring the beautiful Dolores Costello, and the movietone "Talking" news reel in addition to three acts of vitaphone vaudeville and a vitaphone special novelty subject.

"Completely re-educated so that it ranks with the finest of de luxe theaters, the Rialto theater brings to Atlanta a thrill that will sound around the whole city the week is coming.

Title Readers

Dealt Severe Blow.

Telling the knell of doom for that time-honored and age-old mainstay of the motion picture, the man who reads the titles aloud, the Vitaphone and Movietone combination will make its debut to Atlanta audiences Monday at the Rialto theater, when Manager Murray will present what is scheduled to prove a sensational program.

No longer will unfortunate papas have to read the titles aloud to little Beny and tiny daughter much to the disgust of the surrounding ten rows of people, for right there on the screen action will transpose and when a man moves his head he can no longer shout.

The idea is carried out to the most minute detail. Even the news reel, which might well be expected to be titillated, will speak and when President Coolidge looks into the camera he moves his head but can no longer shout. "Hello, Charlie!" to the cameraman, but he might say something well and wisely chosen.

That's a dozen or so of the trouble for the president's official speech. And when we have the old familiar scenes of big baby show in Honktonk, Mich., the yells of the infants will be all too audible.

Well, maybe I shouldn't have mentioned that!

But, seriously, in the opinions of several newspaper authorities who see the new plus ultra of things theatrical about the town, and whose names, for obvious reasons can't be brought into play, the new Rialto program will be the big theatrical sensation of the year.

At any rate, Manager Murray's new scheme will prove intensely popular, or I'll quit picking them and close up shop.

Frank Verdi

In Stealing Business.

But don't be alarmed by that headline. The honesty of the eminent Mr. Verdi, who is the Howard orchestra drummer and son of one of Atlanta's most noted musical families, not at question.

Frank, as you know, is fully as large as I am. He couldn't be larger than I, for if he were, then I couldn't say it with complete physical impunity, for we of the embodiment are somewhat sensitive. And so, as he were smaller than I, then you could say he was larger, but since he is larger, I can't say he is larger—oh, well.

During the past week, this young gentleman with the Italian name scored his third successive "steal" of a hand number at the Howard theater.

'Seventh Heaven' New Bill Of Erlanger Dramatic Co.

"Seventh Heaven," written by Austin Strong, will be the offering of the Robert Williams Players at the Erlanger theater throughout the current week. The play opens on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The story deals with Nana and her young sister, Diane, who tired of village life in France with their intensely religious uncle, returns to Paris, where they fall into evil hands. Diane becomes a hard, brutal drunkard who drives Diane to crime to furnish the money with which to buy her absinthe. In the slums where they live is Chico of the Streets, who rescues Diane from death at the hands of Nana, who then comes to turn and refuses to continue in her life of crime. To save Diane from further attack he takes her to his home just because he "is always doing something he doesn't want to." Three days later he finds her settled in her

America Is a Pioneer in Building Up the New Mechanical Civilization

Optimistic America

By Bertrand Russell

ELICITY," says Hobbs, "consisteth in prospering, not in having prospered." In modern language, it is not the amount of your income that makes you happy, but its rate of increase. The man who, with habits adjusted to one standard of life, finds himself continually in a position to adopt a slightly-higher standard. That is why, on the whole, England was happy under Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria, and America is happy at the present time. I shall be told that I am taking a too materialistic view of the causes of happiness, but before tackling this question let us see in what sense America is more optimistic than Europe.

When I say that America is optimistic I am not saying that America is altogether happy, for although optimism tends to promote happiness it does not always succeed in actually producing it. I may illustrate the point by the comparison of two novels, one English and one American. The English novel is Miss Lehman's "Dusty Answer" and the American novel is Dreiser's "An American Tragedy."

Both novels are exceedingly gloomy, but in the English novel the misfortunes result from pessimism, whereas in the American novel the heroine has various love affairs, all of which come to nothing because neither she nor her lovers can persuade themselves that even love lends any real savor to life, which appears to them all an insipid and hopeless business.

In the American novel, on the contrary, the young man's misfortunes result from the intensity of his conviction that happiness is to be obtained from wealth and fashionable women. A little of his zest would have saved the heroine of "Dusty Answer;" a little of her detachment would have saved the hero of "An American Tragedy."

This difference is, I think, illustrative of the difference between America and post-war Europe. The general inability to believe in anything, which characterizes the young European of the present day, has no doubt a variety of causes. On the part of those who were in the war, nervous exhaustion was and is still a potent factor. On the part of most people there is a cynicism resulting from having made a stupendous effort, which in the end turned out to be of no value. And in all circles there is the discouragement due to the difficult economic situation—aristocrats have to sell their estates to the New Rich, the sons of business men who have expected affluence find themselves compelled to work for small salaries with little hope of promotion, wage earners in spite of herculean efforts, both political and industrial, find unemployment still prevalent and wages still declining. And everybody in Europe has the somewhat dis-

Camp Life Vital for Modern Boy and Girl

Outdoor Recreation in Summer Prevents Children from Becoming Underweight, Physically Run-Down and Mentally Unfit, Educator Declares.

BY WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent, Atlanta Public Schools.

WHAT shall I do with my boy and girl during the summer months?

Over and over this question comes to every parent. The need of an organized program for the months of June, July and August is as pressing a problem as ever confronted the modern mother or father. It is almost an incredible thing to think that intelligent people should plan a highly organized program of education for nine months in the year, then be willing to give a desultory, disjointed and disconnected plan of education for the remaining three months of the year and expect their children to be in good physical, mental and moral condition in September.

It is a strange fact, and one that should challenge the mothers and fathers of our cities, that the vast majority of our children return to school in September badly underweight, physically run down and without mental concentration. The schools begin their campaign for clean teeth, clean bodies, better nutrition, better hours of sleep and a thoroughly organized program, and after nine months of hard work, with the school and home cooperating, we finally get our children up to standard again about April 15. Then on June 1 school is dismissed and our children, missing the regular routine of school, go backward in nutrition and health and come to us again in September in a run-down condition. Then again we commence our regular program of trying to rebuild and reestablish the child after the dissipation of the summer. Surely some way can be found to prevent this loss to the growing, developing boy and girl, and some method should be devised to keep the child up to standard during the summer and bring him back to his school months ready for a vigorous year of activity and study.

To meet the need of summer education many expedients have been suggested. Some educators think that the schools should run for forty-eight weeks in the year, with an easier program and shorter hours for the summer. Others have suggested the daily vacation Bible school with playground work in connection. Many students of boyhood and girlhood feel that definite jobs found for boys and girls in the summer would fill this pressing need. Such organizations as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, along with the Y. M. C. A., have tried to plan activities to meet the growing needs of boys and girls who are out of school.

One of the best means of mental, social, moral and spiritual development for boys and girls from 10 to 15 has been found in the well-organized, well-directed and well-executed summer camp program. In times past the camp was looked upon as an institution for pure recreation and amusement. Today the camp is an institution with a highly educational program and with educational objectives equal to the very best schools of the land. Camp is no longer a luxury. It is a real necessity in the life of a boy or girl. But we must understand just what type of camp will give the physical stamina, the social qualities, the moral background and the spiritual uplift which a boy and girl need.

What is a real camp? What is the type of camp that will meet this educational need? In the first place, it cannot be a summer hotel. It should not be a place which has all of those conveniences and luxuries which have made up his everyday life, but it must be a place which will supply those things which his long primitive education requires. So that if the summer camp is to become a great educational factor it should be situated in a place isolated from the activities of man; it should be where nature gives an opportunity to the growing and developing boy to take his mind from the man-made things of life and place it quietly upon the elemental forces of nature. Too often camps are situated in thickly populated areas, congested around lake fronts, or in places where hundreds and thousands of people pass and congregate. This type of education has been his for nine months in the year. What he needs now is a change back to the primitive.

A real camp, in order to have educational value must not only be a place isolated but it must be a community in which every member works for the benefit and pleasure of every other member. It must be an institution where recreation is made and not purchased. Movies, paid theatri-order of the day. Some few books for leisure hours, some memory gems committed, may serve to keep the mind alert and alive, but formal instruction, lectures or tutoring are not the type of education which the camp should attempt to offer. Observation, memory and comparison should be the chief mental qualities developed in a highly organized, well-developed camp. These are possible and probable when one is in direct contact with nature. The boy or girl who is forced at a summer camp to spend hours being tutored in Latin, French and Spanish is missing the whole educational value of the camp.

Any summer camp to possess real educational value must, of course, be an institution where health is the paramount consideration, where good sleep, regular exercise, well-prepared, nutritious food, efficient medical service are the order of the day. Along with these there are such physical activities as the hike into the woods, the swim, the canoe, the boat, horseback riding and other exercises to which primitive man was accustomed.

The mental habits of boys and girls are wonderfully strengthened by the proper kind of camp activities. The hike into the woods should open the eyes to see as well as exercise the limbs in walking. The study of birds, the collection of flowers, the searching for Indian relics, the preparation of specimens from insect life, the collection of minerals, the study of the heavenly bodies will bring an alertness to the mind that oftentimes the most careful and painstaking attention to books has never aroused.

I cannot close this article without calling attention to the marvelous opportunity for spiritual development which the boy or girl may receive at a summer camp. In the very heart of nature, surrounded by those things which appeal to the growing, developing boy or girl, with a carpet of moss at his or her feet and a canopy of stars overhead, they cannot but think of the Great Creator and Ruler of all things. Naturally, quietly their minds are led into the contemplation of the great spiritual forces which are unseen but about them at all times. There is no forced religious program in a well organized camp. There can be no formal lecturing or preaching to bring about the wanted results, but by careful guidance, by clean, clear-cut example, and by neighborly talks around the campfire or in the tent at night, the great spiritual lessons are impressed upon the growing, developing boy or girl, and they return home not only strengthened in body but with higher ideals and a conception of spiritual life which cannot be forgotten.

Peaceful camp scenes like this keep minds and bodies of boys and girls trim during trying hot months while they are not under the care of teachers and health experts in schools, Superintendent Sutton declares in the accompanying article.

Healthful mental pursuits like those shown here are additional features of modern, well-regulated camp life that lend zest to summer occupations of boys and girls and—supplemented by vigorous outdoor exercise—tend to make camps necessities for growing youngsters, Superintendent Sutton believes. At left, girls engaging in varied and pleasant tasks at camps that are different from routine duties and keep minds alert and rested. At right, story-telling hour in an ideal setting.

Something Just as Good

When Katy Doubled for the Famous Aileen Conrad in Reel Life It Was Hazardous, but When She Took the Role in Real Life She Leaped into Romance.

"We do look alike in make-up, don't we?" Aileen Conrad asked rhetorically of her double.

They were dressing in tents on a stretch of Pacific beach and Katy McNeil had been summoned to the marquee of the star for a final comparison of external details. Aileen would do all of the light comedy sequence and the love scene on the beach while Katy was going to dive from the hundred-foot cliff and swim the rock strewn channel against the tide.

Not that Aileen Conrad was a coward or a physical weakling. But she had recently been elevated to stardom by the Paragon Film corporation at a considerable exploitation expense. A lot of money would be wasted if Aileen got drowned, disfigured or even seriously ill. Katy could be replaced for ten or fifteen dollars a day.

Katy was quite a lot of girl to get for that price, if anybody should ask you. Meaning by that, not quantity, but quality. There was only a little over a hundred pounds of her, but the material was pure silk, first quality with practically no perceptible flaws.

In the one-third piece bathing suits which both girls were wearing it was possible to see how much they did resemble each other. Katy, like Aileen, had slim, slightly boyish legs and delicate, slightly girlish shoulders and breasts, covered with a fine textured outer skin that had the color and soft smoothness of an ivory parchment paper.

Their faces were the same shape. Aileen Conrad, who was really Viennese, had wide, almost Indian cheek bones, and Katy, who was almost certainly Irish, managed to have the same characteristic. Their eyes were near enough of a shade to pass before the camera and their mouths were twin rosebuds, with only this difference, Aileen smiled consciously while Katy's lip corner curled up naturally just like a chow's tail. Their hair had been cut by the same barber the day before and they were both blondes. That had been accomplished the day before, too, because Katy was naturally adorned with tresses that resembled unalloyed copper.

Al Cunningham, general studio manager for Paragon, came into Aileen's tent.

"Which of you is Miss Conrad?" he asked, genuinely puzzled. "Don't tell me. I know now." He turned right to the star. "But I don't mind saying that if I hadn't spotted the tiny mole under your chin I'd have had the deuce of a time picking you out. I've got some big news for you, Aileen."

"Yes?" Aileen was apparently expectant. "A raise in salary, perhaps."

"Gold digger! No. No raise in salary now or ever, so far as I'm concerned. You're getting ten times what any woman is worth now. This is a social item. Manny Sanderson, our honored president, the high mogul of the entire shebang, is coming all the way from his nice warm New York office just to see his newest star."

"To see me?"

"Judge for yourself. I'll read you a part of his letter. Listen! 'Dear Al: I'm leaving for the coast tomorrow. Don't make any engagements for me of any sort, especially social ones. I don't want to be vamped by any lady who wants a better job. So, give three rousing cheers or something?'

"Why should I? You know what this means as well as I do. Mrs. President, my foot! He must have one or two wives living, right now."

"You'll be nice to him, anyway, won't you, Aileen?" Cunningham asked anxiously. "Gee, I've touted you to him pretty strong, myself, and—"

Aileen shrugged her pretty, bare shoulders. "I've got to be, haven't I? But I don't have to like it. Go on back to the office, Al, that's a good boy, and think up some good news for somebody else—Katy and I've got to practice up our smiles before our gentlemanly director gets here."

Al Cunningham got out as, more kill the pig if he touches you with one finger."

"Hush, darling, don't be too Spanish! I've got to be nice to him. We're both working for him and—"

"I don't give a damn. He's not going to make love to my wife."

"Hush, hush, and likewise hush, Emilio! That's a secret."

"All right," Emilio conceded. "Katy, you won't tell any one, will you?"

Katy smiled, that is she broadened the smile which was a piquantly permanent feature.

"No, sir. I'm that relieved to find out that you two are more respectable than I thought."

Emilio laughed and then frowned again as he turned to his wife. "But that doesn't settle the matter of this lecherous old moneybags who is coming out to look you over."

"Perhaps he won't want me," Aileen suggested.

"Won't want you?" Emilio echoed. "Then he won't be human. Any man would want you."

"You won't need me any more?" asked Katy, edging toward the tent flap, perfectly willing to escape the family councils.

"No," decided Aileen and then corrected herself. "Wait a minute, Katy. We might at that. Why not?"

"Why not what?" demanded her husband surly.

"Why not have Katy double for me socially while Manny Sanderson is here?"

"All three of them considered this for a moment in thoughtful silence.

"Could we get away with it?"

Aileen shrugged. "We might. She fools nearly everybody, even those who know me pretty well. Sanderson has never seen me and all those stills were taken with make-up on. Isn't it worth trying?"

Emilio turned to Katy. "Would you do it?"

Katy hesitated.

"For a hundred dollars a day?" he added.

Katy thought rapidly. A hundred dollars a day was a good many times ten or fifteen dollars. Further than that the proposition savored of an adventure and, heaven knows, the Irish can never resist the lure of an unfamiliar trail.

"Yes," she decided. "I'll be Miss Conrad for three days if you want me to."

"But you must promise," cautioned Aileen herself, "not to do anything that will compromise me in any way."

Katy grinned. "I'll be as careful of your good name as I would be of my own. And," she added, "the McNeils are noted for the permanency of their maiden reputations."

The morning that Katy left to take up Miss Conrad's interrupted life at a famous hotel she told her mother she was going on "location" and would be away several days.

Mrs. McNeil looked up from the sink full of breakfast dishes with a swift tightening of the heart. She hated to have Katy double, but she had never protested after the first time. Katy was her own boss and doubling did pay twice as much as being an extra.

"Is it something very dangerous this time?" the older woman asked.

"Not dangerous at all," Katy assured her blithely. "It's for some work Miss Conrad could do just as well herself, but she's being temperamental about it."

It was a long step from the crowded cluttered three-room apartment where her mother housed six chilor less politely, he had been requested.

But his place was almost immediately taken by a tall, handsome young man in summer flannels and a sunburned make-up. That the sunburn was grease paint proclaimed him as a fellow actor. Besides that his clothes were just too immaculate and too well pressed for even the wealthiest idler at the swankiest beach club along the waterfront.

He stepped unerringly to Aileen's side and kissed her a little fervently on the shoulder.

"Are you sure you've kissed the right one, Emilio?" she asked, really smiling for the first time.

She patted his hand affectionately but as she did so a frown puckered her brows. "Al Cunningham was just here."

"Yes. I noticed him going into your tent."

"That's why you came over yourself! Jealous?"

"No, but—"

She laughed again. "Wait till you hear why Al came." She told him the news. "What do you think of that for a long distance sex appeal? I charm 'em from coast to coast."

It was Emilio's turn to frown. "I'll dren and herself to Miss Conrad's spacious suite at the hotel.

Aileen spent half the day discussing the plan and going over what portions of her wardrobe Katy would be allowed to wear. Then Aileen left for her husband's bungalow on a Hollywood hillside and Katy let herself settle down gradually into the comfortable luxuriance of her new nest.

It was very nice, Katy thought—almost as good as some of the sets in the studio. She wished that her mother might be there to share the comfort.

And, incidentally, to bolster her up for the coming ordeal with this ogre—who probably ate little girls and very likely preferred his blondes raw.

She first met Manny Sanderson at dusk. He had been brought to the suite by Al Cunningham, who introduced them and discreetly pleaded another engagement.

"Why, he's a little man and slender!" Katy thought to herself. "And I've never seen such eyes on a human being."

They talked for him, those eyes of Manny Sanderson's. He seldom had much to say for himself vocally, especially with women, but the gentle sincerity of his gaze compelled the attention of at least the lady upon whom it rested. Not that they were large and beautiful like a leading man's. On the contrary, they were just medium sized gray ones not more than ordinarily shielded by lashes and brows. But they inspired trust even among men. Katy did not know that his business associates called him "a king" and that no one ever put over a raw deal on him because it couldn't be done after talking with him face to face for a few minutes.

The thing that she was about to attempt—to sell him something just as good in place of the real article—had never even been tried before.

"I thought you were older," Katy told him when they were alone together, driving to Altadena for dinner.

"And I thought your voice would be less musical," he returned, slightly husky himself at the discovery that it was Manny Sanderson whom he heard saying things like that. "But I am older than you think."

"No. Thirty-nine isn't so—"

"How do you know my exact age?"

"Why—" Katy paused in some confusion. "I seem to know a good many things about you."

"Al Cunningham has told you."

"No. I'm quite sure he hasn't because I didn't know them at all before I met you."

She knew, for instance, that he liked certain kinds of music—modified oriental jazz—the type she favored, herself. They danced twice during dinner. He was a reserved partner but madly gay inside. She guessed that his spirit was doing a fandango while his feet sedately moved in fox trot shackles. Katy was a demure dancer herself and said pagan things with her lithe young body that were never in the composer's score.

Only twice they danced. "I'd be afraid of waking up into reality if we tried it again," he explained as he led her during a waltz into the pergolaed garden. "Now listen to those bullfrogs absolutely disregarding the tempo of the orchestra."

The frogs inhabited cement pools which were supplied by wind bell fountains. There was a moon, orange blossom scent, twinkling breathless lights on the mountain sides, everything that the most astute of directors assisted by the best property men and electricians could devise.

And yet he did not touch her. Katy knew that he wouldn't, although before she had met him she had decided privately just how far she would let him go.

Instead, he told her of interesting things he had seen abroad on his most recent trip to acquire American rights to European successes. "But I want to go some time with some one who doesn't think that the only difference between New York and Paris is technical prohibition and who can look upon a hill topped town by moonlight with a medieval mind. I want to hear the clank of armor in the streets. But it takes two to do it."

That was as near as he came to sentiment that first night.

But the next evening—it was at supper somewhere after an indifferent performance of a New York success by a touring company—he made this astonishing speech:

"I came to California to see you, Aileen, and for no other reason. I'll admit now that I thought I wanted merely to play with you. I had an idea that you would satisfy my craving for physical beauty in a woman.

"I find that I underestimated the effect you would have on me. I thought I should be quite content to buy a little of your companionship by an increase of salary or some advancement in the profession which you seem so strangely ill suited to. Now I know that would not be enough. You satisfy me in every way—your beauty, your understanding, your gentleness, all awaken in me a wonder I have so long existed without you. I—"

"Mr. Sanderson," Katy tried to stop him.

"Wait," he commanded. "I'm asking you to marry me, Aileen."

There, he had done it. She wasn't in his arms or anything. He had never even offered to kiss her. It was as old fashioned a proposal as any Puritan maid could ever have had.

She belonged to him. Katy had known that almost from the first minute.

"And I've been waiting for you," he continued, answering her thoughts. "Don't think that love comes only to children or young men starting out to carve a fortune for their sweethearts. I've never said this to a woman before, although that isn't because I've been too busy making a fortune. I don't really give a damn about money, but I've only been piling up a mess of it to kill time while I was waiting to find you. I make money easily but I love you just as much as if I were a poor boy on the threshold of achievement. I have to return to New York Saturday. Can we be married tomorrow?"

Of course he had every right to take her consent for granted that way. Even if his position of czar in the film business had not entitled him to beckon to the one he wanted, he knew, as one man must at some one time know one woman, that she was his for the asking.

But she was sailing under false colors—colors that she could not strike without betraying the real Aileen, perhaps crippling her film future irretrievably. She knew that she was genuinely in love with this man who had so gently assumed control of her heart, but he, perhaps, adored what was only a shell of the real thing. Before she could answer him he must be told and she couldn't tell him now, not until Aileen released her from her agreement.

"I'm sorry," she said in reply to his question, "but I can't possibly marry you tomorrow."

He looked at her searchingly. "You do not love me?"

"But I do," she replied simply.

"Then everything else is unimportant." He swept the world aside with a gesture.

"No," she insisted. "I can't even tell you tonight what the barrier is. Perhaps tomorrow—"

He let it go at that. When he said good-night she offered her lips. She owed herself that memory.

Her kiss was snow fire.

It burned on his lips through a white night. Sleeplessness was a new experience to Manny. That it should come to him because of a woman was totally unexpected.

He felt that he must know what it was that stood between them. She had said that she cared. What else could matter? Not her career, certainly, because he was the one man in all the world who could set her name in electric lights on every theater in the land.

At ten o'clock he telephoned. She was out. At the studio probably. He went out on the lot—to her dressing room bungalow.

There was no one there but a colored maid looking through the dresser drawers.

"Miss Conrad is feelin' poorly this morning," she told him in response to his question as to Aileen's whereabouts. "and she sent me to fetch her headache prescription. Here it is."

"O, I'm sorry." Manny left the dressing room with the maid. "I'd like to see her a moment, anyway. Suppose I give you a lift back to the hotel."

The maid smiled. "Thank you. But she isn't at the hotel this morning. She's staving at the bungalow."

The maid told the chauffeur the Hollywood address. Manny stopped on the way for flowers.

At the bungalow the maid left him in the living room while she went to convey the news of his presence to her mistress. She was gone quite a while and finally returned to say that Miss Conrad was not in her room but was doubtless with Mr. Emilio and would be out in a short while.

"With Mr. Emilio?" Manny repeated, puzzled.

"Yes, sir. Sometimes they sleep in her room and sometimes in his."

"You're referring to Emilio Vanarro, the actor?"

"Yes, sir."

"They're married—Mr. Vanarro and Miss Conrad?"

Yes, indeed. Some people thinks they ain't, but I seen the certificate. You ain't a newspaper man, are you? She told me I mustn't tell no newspaper man anything."

"No," Manny assured her with his lips. His mind was elsewhere trying to strangle his heart which insisted that this thing could not be.

"I don't think I'll wait," he found himself saying to the maid, "and unless you feel that you have to I'd appreciate it if you would not mention that any one has been here."

He reinforced his request with a ten dollar bill.

It was enough. His visit was never spoken of.

Katy wondered why he did not come for her that day. Her wonder grew into an acute agony as the next day went past without word from him. Finally she telephoned Al Cunningham and asked point blank for Mr. Sanderson.

"He returned to New York yesterday," he told her.

Where, now, was the highly advertised California sunshine? Katy had never known that it was possible to feel so gloomy. The thing that was in her throat could not, really and physiologically, be her heart, but it certainly felt like it.

Two days later Aileen Conrad called her to her dressing room and gave Katy a check for three hundred dollars.

Aileen was about to dismiss her but thought better of it. "I suppose you may as well see this, too." She held out a letter. "I think, in a way, that it is meant for both of us."

Without looking at the signature Katy knew who had written it. Her hands trembled a little as she unfolded the brief single sheet of railway stationery.

"Dear Miss Conrad: This is a very difficult note to write and yet I feel that some explanation of my abrupt departure without saying good-bye is due to you.

"I suppose that I should be delighted to discover that you are such a wonderful actress and that our company has you under a long term contract.

"Unfortunately I find myself wishing to God that you were not. You broke the habit of a long life of skepticism about women and it is very hard for me to find any comfort in my old time philosophy.

"However, I am a business man and I assure you that you need not have worried, nor need you worry in the future, about the continuance of your relations with the company no matter what 'the barrier'.

"But you will forgive me if I never again enter a projection room or a theater where a feature starring you is being shown. Not because I should blame you, but because it would hurt.

"Yours, M. S."

Aileen regarded the suddenly white face of her erstwhile double with some curiosity. "It would seem almost that our distinguished employer has fallen for us, Katy, look me in the eye—did you vamp him?"

"Not intentionally."

"Not intentionally! Hum. Well, that would make it worse. How many times did he kiss you?"

"Only once."

"Woof! You must pack an awful wallop back of that smile of yours. But where is your smile? Katy, look at me again. Why, Katy, dear, you didn't get hurt, too, did you?"

Katy managed a smile. "Not very much. And besides I'm paid to take chances. It's all in the game."

Aileen didn't see her again. The picture was all done and she was getting ready to take a vacation. The plan included a trip to Paris for frocks and one thing and another for the next feature. But the beautiful young star did not entirely forget the girl who was paid to take chances—even on shipboard, although, by a strange coincidence, Emilio Vanarro had booked a passage on the same line. Aileen had an uneasy memory of the death of Katy's smile and that memory haunted her until her return to America.

In New York she determined to lay the ghost.

She called on Manny Sanderson at the main office of the Paragon company. Her presence created quite a stir among the staff, but Mr. Sanderson's secretary regretfully informed her that the president himself was out. Aileen knew that he was lying because some one had been speaking to him on an interoffice phone when her name had been sent in.

But that evening, shortly before the dinner hour, she wrapped herself up in her most severe tailleur and called at the gorgeous hotel where Mr. Sanderson managed to eke out a wretched bachelor existence in a three-room suite.

Unfortunately the same secretary was on duty and he was about to spring his recently received instructions that Mr. Sanderson was always out when she called when Aileen forestalled him.

"I know he thinks he doesn't want

When Justice Triumphed ::

OME time ago The Constitution published the story of a Reid Ice Cream company holdup and murder in Newark, N. J., for which four men were electrocuted in one evening. Today is presented the story of another Reid Ice Cream robbery and murder. And a much more exciting story it is, too, for it involves one of the bloodiest and most desperate prison breaks in the history of New York.

Actually the robbery was only an incident in the busy career of the McKenna brothers and their associates. But it marked the beginning of the end of this gang of metropolitan cut-throats. According to the police, they are now all either in prison or various local cemeteries.

Whether it was a coincidence or not one can't say, but the holdup at the Reid plant at 9 West 14th street, Manhattan, on July 25, 1926, occurred but six days after that murderous affair in Newark. Four men took part. They climbed the stairs to the office on the second floor shortly after 5 p. m. When William Peek, the cashier, looked up, he saw four pistols aimed at him.

"Up wit' 'em!" ordered one of the gunmen. Peek obeyed without a word. Then, as another of the robbers walked to the heavy safe which stood open, the office manager, Lester Concannon, entered. He was driven back and beaten with pistol butts until he fell unconscious.

The gunmen scooped up $12,000 in cash and checks, put the receipts in a tin box and started downstairs. In passing they each gave Peek a tap on the head with their guns.

At the bottom of the stairs the robbers encountered Cecil Linderman, a driver. Linderman had no idea that they were holdup men and made no move to halt them. Nevertheless, as one of the men declared later, he "looked suspicious," so in the words of the underworld, they let him have it.

The Fight.

Only one shot was fired; the bullet struck Linderman in the abdomen. As he pitched forward, unconscious, the quartet jumped into an automobile at the curb, where a fifth man was waiting, and roared south. The car sped down Fifth avenue to 122d street, and then turned east. Near Third avenue the machine crashed into a fire hydrant, injuring a man who was talking on the sidewalk with friends.

The five gunmen leaped from the damaged car and started on the run for various doorways. Three policemen started after them. Three of the five drew automatic pistols and fired at their pursuers. Pedestrians fled wildly for shelter. When the smoke of battle subsided, four of the five had escaped.

The fifth, captured in one of the doorways, said he was Peter Powers, 34. The officers found on him two fully loaded pistols and $600 in Reid company cash and checks.

In subsequent days Linderman, the injured driver, hovered between life and death.

The police in their investigation arrived at certain conclusions regarding the other members of the gang, with the result that on the afternoon of July 30, when Mike McKenna came to report to the parole board, detectives were waiting to receive him.

Mike, red-haired like his brother John (Red) McKenna, had been put out of prison only twenty days. His man! I'll take my dying oath he's the one!"

Then the convict was led away.

Linderman died August 7. The charges against McKenna and Powers were changed from robbery to murder. The two were indicted a week later and were committed to the Tombs to await trial.

And now our violent tale jumps ahead to the afternoon of November 3, 1926.

Early on this momentous afternoon, six prisoners in the Tombs began to groan and complain of fever brother, a gunman with a long criminal record, had just recently been arrested in another $12,000 holdup. This was the first of Mike's required visits to the parole board. As he entered, hands in his pockets, he wore that benign expression becoming to a convict who is behaving himself.

A Bit Too Late.

Inside the office, Detectives Hayias and Senff, of the homicide squad, walked toward him, slowly and cautiously, hoping to take their man without a struggle. But McKenna recognized them. His hands flashed from his pocket—just a bit too late. Before he could fire, Hayias had Mike's gunhand in a death grip.

They took McKenna to Linderman's bedside at the hospital. "That's the man who plugged me," said the driver. "But make him put his hat on so I can be sure." McKenna did this. "You'd better be sure," he remarked.

Linderman cried out: "That's the and pains. Among them were as desperate a trio as one could find in any rogues' gallery—McKenna of the fiery hair and hot temper; Hyman Amberg, one of the murderers of Aaron Rodack, the "fighting jeweler," and Robert Berg, a former member of the Whittemore mob.

Powers, also an inmate at the time, was another of the sextet.

Amberg wrote a note to Tombs Physician Perry M. Lichtenstein, begging for medical attention. It was decided to take three at a time to the medical office.

Keeper Cornelius Shea escorted McKenna, Berg and Amberg from their cells on the first tier to the main floor. As they walked they feigned illness cleverly enough to throw Shea completely off his guard.

Nearing the physician's office, which is only about twenty feet from the big iron gate on Centre street, the main entrance to the Tombs, the three prisoners suddenly whipped out pistols and made a dash for the gate. Berg led the way, a gun in each hand. As he ran he shouted to Louis Lorch, the elderly keeper on guard there, to throw open the door.

Lorch, a veteran of two wars and any number of prison breaks, had his hand on the huge steel key which was at the moment inserted in the lock. As the gunmen came toward him he calmly turned the key in the lock.

"Louis, you —," shouted Berg, "open that door!"

"You go to hell," said Lorch. Then he dropped the key in his pocket and went into action himself. He was unarmed but he nonplussed the trio by running toward them instead of away from them.

Warden Peter J. Mallon, in charge of the prison, started up from his desk in his office on the main floor. The door flung open. A volley of bullets. Mallon fell forward on his face. Lorch kept on going and escaped. The prison was in an uproar. Lorch's refusal to open the door frustrated the convicts' plans but McKenna and his companions decided to do or die.

The Guards Appear.

Fearful of being cornered inside the building, the trio rushed through a passage leading to the prison yard, apparently hoping to intimidate the guards at the Lafayette street entrance into opening it for them. Neither guard was there. Jeremiah Murphy, ordinarily on duty at the gate, had gone to the head keeper's office, and Daniel O'Connor was inside the building. Both keepers had their keys with them.

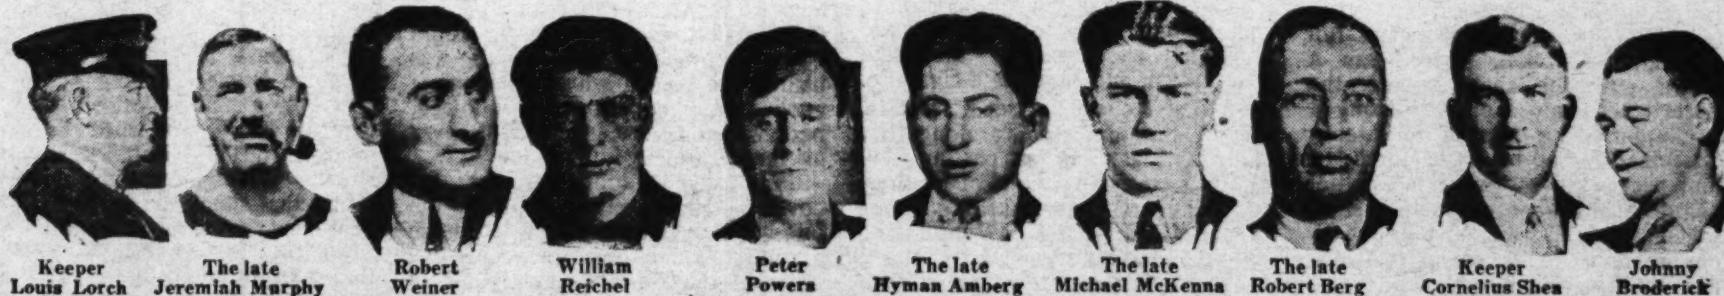

The yard is a large open space extending along Fayette street from Leonard to Franklin streets. On the east of it rise the granite walls of the prison with rows of black bars marking the six tiers of cells topped by great chimneys and turrets. On the north, south and west of the yard are the walls of the yard, twenty-five feet high. Overlooking the yard are the criminal court building on the north, the Conklin building on the west and the Board of Transportation building on the south.

McKenna, Amberg and Berg had hardly reached the coal pile when Keepers O'Connor and Murphy appeared. The guards had heard the shooting and had concluded that they ought to be at their posts. They ran from the prison building to a small wooden house inside the Lafayette street gate. The prisoners at once opened fire.

One of the bullets caught O'Connor in the side and he dropped to the ground outside of the gatehouse. Murphy got inside the door and began shooting, wounding Berg in the left side of the face. Then a bullet hit Murphy in the mouth and passed through his brain.

Mike and his pals made a rush for the two men to get their keys but

THE CASTLE OF GATH.

HERE was no time to make any plans. The man was walking fast, and, as I have shown, Lass was no better than a maze.

With one consent the three of us rushed to the door, and, while Hanbury was speaking to the bookseller, Bell and I stepped directly into the street.

Mercifully, a cart was standing not six feet away, and as we darted behind it I saw that we had before us the very deuce of a task. The man was, of course, on his guard and knew us by sight: the hour was early and, though the shops were open—because, I suppose, it was market day—there were not twenty people in view; yet, had the street been crowded, our dress was fatally distinctive and had only to be seen to betray us and our design.

In a flash I had my coat off and had flung it into the cart. I pitched my hat after it, rolled my sleeves to the elbows, and, seizing a sack of refuse which was standing open mouthed on the curb, swung this on to my shoulder and started, bent double, down the street.

I know the disguise was feeble, but I dared wait no more; and that was as well, for before I had taken five steps the man glanced over his shoulder and turned to the left.

We had now a stroke of good fortune, without which I cannot believe that we should have got very far, for it gave us a breathing space and let me fall back a little and Hanbury and Bell come up.

I had hardly come to the corner when I saw the fellow enter a tobacconist's shop.

At once I turned, to see Hanbury close behind. He was wearing a black overcoat, green with age, and the bookseller's hat, which came down over his ears. In his hands was a newspaper, open as though to be read.

"Watch the tobacconist's," I said, and dashed between two houses to tear off my collar and tie.

As I returned a man passed, wheeling a bicycle. His form seemed familiar, and when I looked at him again I saw that it was Bell. He had no coat, hat, or collar; his trousers were clapped at the ankle and seemed to be falling down; his face and hands were filthy beyond compare. He glanced down the street on his left, and there, I suppose, seeing Hanbury, picked up his cue and turned.

As I came again to the corner our man came out of his shop. For a moment he looked about him, but seeing, I imagine, nothing at all suspicious, presently turned on his heel and went his way.

He was a tall, loose limbed fellow, with a pasty face; he walked as though he liked the look of himself, and wore his hat on one side; and since I presently learned that he was called "Casemate," from now on I will speak of him by name.

I was slouching along behind him, still shouldering my sack, very conscious of my respectability and full admiration for Bell, when I saw a crowd gathered ahead where the street bellied into a place in front of a church. This seemed to interest Casemate, for all his haste, for I saw him peering to see what the matter might be; but when he was nearer he suddenly turned away and passed by on the opposite pavement, with his eyes on the ground.

I was wondering at his behavior, when the crowd began to move and then fall away. Then I saw a familiar bonnet and Mansel, with Rowley beside him, driving a Rolls. Behind came Carson.

Now, such a meeting was more than I could have hoped for, for I had been racking my brain for some way in which to find Mansel and tell him what was afoot. Yet, though we were so happily met, I dared make no sign, for Casemate had his chin on his shoulder and I could not have caught Mansel's eye without catching his.

Going as slowly as I dared, with the tail of my eye I watched the car draw abreast; but the crowd was about her wings, and Mansel never looked up. I could have stamped for vexation, for Hanbury was shuffling upon the far side of the street, and Bell was already by. Then Carson cried out a warning and I heard a clatter and crash. Bell had wheeled his bicycle into the second car.

As he picked himself up, I heard Mansel asking for news.

"It's all right, sir," said Carson, "a cyclist"—Bell gave him a malignant look—"a cyclist walked into the car. And, excuse me, sir, but you're rather down on the right. I think you must have broken a spring."

That was as much as I heard and all that I wanted to know, for, if, when upon the road, one of us wished to say something which was not for every one's ears, he had but to state that the car before or behind him had broken a spring: such a statement would naturally call for investigation, and, while this was being conducted, the communication could easily be made.

Now all this was well enough, but, when I returned to Casemate, I saw that he had stopped and was standing under an archway, with his eyes on the two cars and a hand to his mouth.

For a moment my brain faltered. I dared not dally, and the last thing I wanted to do was to overtake the man. He had but to dwell upon my clothes to find them strange, and to walk with his eyes upon my back would be the way of a fool. Then I saw a cafe beside me, with a table outside its door.

As they brought me wine and cigarettes, I saw Casemate's head appear round the bend of the road.

How long he watched me I do not know, for I dared not look again at the bend until I had drunk my wine; but, when at last I threw it a careless glance, he was out of sight.

At once I left the cafe and took to the road.

Ten minutes went by before I saw Casemate again, for the way was a natural pass and humored every whim of the mountains, rising and falling and twisting as these decreed. Indeed, I was afraid I had lost him and was on the point of breaking into a run, when I rounded a corner to see him ten paces away. I drew back at once out of sight, but the encounter shocked me, for it showed how unfitted I was for such an exercise.

But worse was to come.

I had gone, I suppose, a mile in fear and trembling, and the road had begun to rise in a steady climb, when I peered round a bend, to see Casemate retracing his steps.

Now I had just covered a fairly long, straight reach of road, and, before I could have retreated, he would have had me in view. This was plainly the reason why he had gone about, for, if he was being followed, here was the very place to discover his man.

Frantically I looked round for cover, but there was none at all. On one hand an open meadow fell down abruptly to the level the road had left; on the other a high bank of earth rose into a crumbling cornice that overhung the way. Only an oak leaned out of the earthy wall and to see about me and to mark the lie of the land.

Lass lay in a trough of the mountains, the wooded slopes of which pressed close upon every side; the approaches to the town were hidden, and even the railway line was not to be seen. I have known villages so bound, but never another town, and the dignity of spires and gables so landlocked was very pleasing. Yet, as I have said, I was sure that Adele was not here, and, when Casemate soon took a way which ran out of the town, to curl out of sight between two beetling woods, I was not at all surprised.

That here, however, we three must make ourselves scarce was obvious enough, for, if the streets had been idle, except for a laboring wagon, the road to come was bare. And, while I was thinking how we should bring this about, the thing was done.

Bell mounted his bicycle, slowly overtook Casemate and passed out of sight; Hanbury turned up a passage which seemed to lead to the woods, and I was left. As plainly as though they had spoken, they meant me to bring up the rear.

The maneuver was sound and perfectly carried out: I was filled with admiration for Hanbury and Bell; but the burden of Casemate's suspicion was now thrown full upon me, and I was by no means certain that I could carry the weight. I had no cover; mechanics are seldom seen tramping a country road; no man or beast seemed to be going our way.

I continued to walk on slowly, watching Casemate approach the bend and racking my brain. As he turned, he hung on his heel, and after a long look behind him, passed out of view.

My fears now came to a head, and I dared not go on. I was sure the fellow was waiting for me to come up. Let I dared not stop without reason, nor, without reason, disappear. Then I saw a cafe beside me, with a table outside its door.

As they brought me wine and cigarettes, I saw Casemate's head appear round the bend of the road.

How long he watched me I do not know, for I dared not look again at the bend until I had drunk my wine; but, when at last I threw it a careless glance, he was out of sight.

was thrusting a branch like a roof tree over the road.

I am a tall man, but heavy, and to this day I cannot tell how I managed to leap so high; but, if I am heavy, I was desperate, and, as I have found before, desperation is a remarkable goad.

Be that as it may, in an instant I had hold of the bough and a moment later was astride it, looking down upon the ground. I then fell forward and cautiously raised my feet, till I was lying along it and, though there was little foliage, pretty well hid. The branch was massive and rigid as any rock.

Casemate rounded the corner and passed below where I hung. Finding the road deserted, he stopped in his tracks and, after a long look, turned on his heel and began to walk back up the hill, whistling some air as he went. He paused for a moment beneath me to take out a cigarette, and as he did so we both heard the sound of the horn of an oncoming car.

Now this meant nothing to me, for the horn was that of some car which was going to Lass, but Casemate stiffened like a pointer and stood with his ears pricked and a match in one of his hands and its box in the other. Indeed, so concerned was his demeanor, that I expected him every instant to take to his heels, though why he should fear some car which could hardly be one of ours I could not think.

The horn was not sounded again, but soon we heard a car coming at a high enough speed.

Casemate immediately whipped to the side of the road, and taking his stand by the bend peered anxiously round. The next moment he was out in the fairway, spreading and waving his arms as a signal to stop.

I heard the brakes clapped on, but the car was round the corner before it had come to rest.

Casemate came running back, and somebody put out a head.

"What is it?" said Rose Noble.

I was so much dumbfounded that I nearly fell down from the bough, and then I saw that the luck I had found so unkind a moment ago was playing into our hands.

"Somebody's talking" said Casemate. "She's got word through to mother, and Big Willie's at Lass."

There was a moment of silence, then:

"How d'you know?" said Rose Noble.

"Jute," said Casemate. "Last night they came for Big Willie and told him that she had made touch. Jute heard them say so. Big Willie was off like a cracker, and when he was good and gone Jute slipped up to the station and took the train."

"And led him to Lass," said Rose Noble. "Go on."

"B-but—"

"Go on."

"He's there," said Casemate, doggedly. "I've seen him. Stuck up in the streets, with a Punch and Judy crowd round both of his cars."

"Where's Jute?"

"Lying low in the lodge."

"Thought he'd done enough harm, I suppose?"

"He didn't bring him," said Casemate. "Big Willie's—"

"Of course he brought him," roared Rose Noble, bursting out of the car. "You snake-idiot, what do you take me for? Got word through to mother?" This isn't Marlborough street." He slammed the door with a fury that shook the car. "By—," he added, using a dreadful oath, "wait till I get at Jute! I told him they'd try to bounce him, and I made him swear never to move when Big Willie was out of sight. Never. Why did he come by train?"

Ribbon Serial

"Car wouldn't start," said Casemate.

"And that never showed him?" raged Rose Noble.

Casemate essayed no answer, but only stared upon the ground, plainly resenting a trouncing which Jute had won, yet sullenly conscious that, by adopting Jute's reading, he had put himself out of court.

Rose Noble ripped off his hat and mopped his face.

"Who was with Big Willie?" he demanded.

"Two of the servants," said Casemate.

For a moment Rose Noble stood still, with his head in the air. Then he lowered his eyes and looked at Casemate.

I suppose there was that in his gaze which shocked the other, for he shrank back against the wall, protesting the truth of his words.

"Quite right, purred Rose Noble, "quite right. You only saw two of the servants. I passed the third on the road five minutes ago."

A moment later the car was being turned round.

I think this short colloquy must show how fine and swift a brain our principal enemy had. No matter how clogged, he had the truth free in an instant, and though when he passed him he had not recognized Bell—and for that he can hardly be blamed, for he had seen him but once—the moment he learned that one servant was not with Mansel he knew why the dirty cyclist was taking his subordinate's road. That he made no mention at all of Hanbury or me was, I confess, a considerable blow to my pride, but I fear he credited us with little cunning, but only a blunt pugnacity when it came to a fight.

Now, whether this stung into action my mother wit I cannot say, but I know that, as he and Casemate entered the car, I saw at my feet a chance, which never would come again.

The car was closed and its canopy was fixed; the road was narrow, and in his endeavors to turn the driver was bringing his charge directly below where I hung. For me to alight on its roof was the easiest thing in the world, and once I was there, lying flat, although there was no luggage rail, I could grip the canopy's edge above the driver, for a shield, which is called a "sun visor," was there to conceal my hands.

In a flash I was sitting sideways upon the bough, and as the car came back for the last time I stepped gingerly on to its roof, trusting to my rubber soled shoes to make no noise. I was flat in an instant, or the branch would have knocked me down, and a moment later I had fast hold of the rim which was to keep me steady and save me from sliding off.

As the car thrust forward—

"Bunch," said Rose Noble to the driver, "if you see that cyclist, run him down."

"You bet," said Bunch, and put the car at the hill with the rush of a bull.

I was not much alarmed for Bell's safety, for I was quite certain that he had observed Rose Noble and, if he was yet upon the road, had only to hear the car coming to disappear. In deed, I had my work cut out to think for myself, for the road was none too even and I was mortally afraid of losing my place.

Bunch was a good driver and swooped at his corners in a spectacular way, but whenever he swung the car round I had to fight like a madman to stay where I was, and if the fowls of the air have a sense of humor, my progress must have afforded them infinite mirth. Except for one sharp descent, our road continued to rise or to keep the height it had won, and, so far as I can remember, we met no other vehicle. Two or three peasants passed, and the sight of them staring at me sent my heart to my mouth; but not one of those in the car seemed to notice their gaze—or, if they did, to find it curious.

At last we came to crossroads, where we turned to the moated on three of its sides by God knows what depths and inaccessible only on the fourth.

The walls were high and massive, rose into battlements and looked as good as new; and the place had an air of being old, rather than ancient and more of an aerie than a keep. It was clearly inhabited for there were blinds in its windows and smoke rising from some chimney I could not see. Indeed, I could see nothing beyond the great facade except a crooked spire which stood up on the left. A stout, round tower rose at each end of the wall; these were corniced and had red, conical roofs; in the midst of the wall was a gateway, the great doors of which were shut.

I was now trembling with excitement, for the castle, of course, was the goal to which we had been trying

ped. I had moved as far as I could to the right of the canopy so as to make the most of what cover I had; whether I moved again was depending on where the man stood who admitted the car. With one of the great doors set wide, the car could pass in, and if, as I fully expected, the left hand door was opened, the porter was sure to hold it and I should be out of his sight.

Now so much fell out very well. Only one door was open, and that was the left; I saw the hands of the porter pulling it back; but the door had been made in two halves and while the lower swung open the upper stayed fast.

The car was about to pass in—with three inches of head room to spare, and if I stayed on her roof I should be swept off or crushed—probably crushed.

Had I not been on the edge I must have been badly hurt, for Bunch thrust forward as though he knew I was there.

I got to my knees and jumped as best I could.

Happily I lit upon turf, but this sloped down from the drive, and I tumbled like a clown in the sawdust, before I could bring myself up. As I did so I heard the door shut and the bolts shot home.

To report to Mansel was plainly the first thing to do; and, since any one at a window could have shot me down, I got to my feet and started to run for the wood. Except that I was shaken, I felt none the worse for my fall; and there I think I was lucky, for I had leaped blindly and had not taken off clean.

Half way to the wood I rested behind a tree and looked about me.

The prospect was magnificent indeed; all around were mountains and forests, rising and falling as far as the eye could see, and the sky being very blue and the sunshine brilliant, the castle looked fabulous, and a man that came suddenly upon it might well have been forgiven for rubbing his eyes.

How Rose Noble had come to be so installed I could not think, but, had he spent his life searching, he could not have found a prison one-half so suitable. The place was solitary and most secure; no cries could be heard, nor any signals seen; the one approach was hidden, and such as found it could not conceal there coming for there were not six trees on the spur and the wood lay two hundred yards from the castle wall.

This reflection made me take to my heels, for if I could withdraw unseen, that would be a point in our favor, and we had none to spare. Indeed, when I thought of those walls my spirits sank, and remembering how near I had come to passing in, I could have struck myself. What was worse, I was sure that had he been placed as I, Mansel would somehow have done it and not have let slip a chance which surely was gone for good.

So I came to the wood, and after watching for some time for any sort of sign that I had been seen, made my way down the drive as fast as I could.

Twenty minutes later I reached the crossroads.

There to my great surprise, Rowley rose out of a ditch and said that Mansel was waiting a stone's throw away. Then he told me which way to take, and a moment later I saw the two cars below me and Mansel and George poring over a paper book, while Carson was feeding right, and, very soon after, we left the road for a drive which led into a wood so artlessly and was so shrouded with moss and litter the trees had made a man might have passed it by as promising nothing at all. Yet in less than two minutes of time the wood was behind us and we were heading for a castle which seemed to me to command all the kingdoms of the earth.

We were now upon the spur of a mountain, and I judged some three thousand feet up. The driver ran straight down the spur, the sides of which were plainly precipitous, for after a little the turf which flanked the drive fell suddenly out of sight. The whole of the end of the spur was masked by the castle's facade, and it was easy to see that the building had been set on the spur as the nail upon a man's finger, that is to say,

"All right?" I heard him say.

"O. K." said the other, and opened the little door. Rose Noble and Casemate passed in.

Now, as soon as the car had stop-

THE LAST FLIG

Floyd Bennett, One of America's Heroes of the Air, Has Died For the Happy Landing

Flight
An Aviation Memorial

Gutzon Borglum

FLOYD BENNETT'S glorious death was illustrative of his whole life. Nothing could sto him. He always went straight for his objective. He disregarded obstacles. His meek quiet exterior, so pronounced that in my contact with him he gave me the impression of suffering from an inferiority complex, concealed not only tremendous ability, resourcefulness and sound judgment, but unshakable determination as well.

So when the doctors told him he must not make this flight to rescue the Bremen fliers—that his physical condition would not permit it—he ignored their advice. He made the flight and died, though his death was not due to any mistake in his flying technique.

But I think it was the kind of death he would have preferred. It was not so spectacular, perhaps, as if he had crashed, but on the other hand the tragedy is not marred by any suspicion that he had made a mistake—that he had shown bad flying judgment or had not been careful enough in his inspection of the plane before taking off. It was his frail body that collapsed.

Floyd Bennett was one of the greatest natural fliers I ever met. The first time I ever saw him was when he came to Bolling Field for instruction in flying land planes. All his experience before that had been in flying sea-planes in the navy.

*Floyd Bennett in the Cockpit Just Before

Admiral Moffett called up Bolling Field one day and told us he had picked Floyd Bennett on the recommendation of Commander Richard E. Byrd to go on the MacMillan expedition to the arctic. He told us that the planes to be used on this expedition were amphibians and that Bennett had no experience with land planes. He wanted me to fly with Bennett in various types of land planes so as to give him that experience.

Bennett appeared at Bolling Field the next day. He was so quiet I hardly knew what to make of him. He never spoke at all except when it was necessary, and yet managed to create the impression of being pleasant despite his continual silence.

I took him up in a dual-controlled plane. Before we had been in the air three minutes I knew that this was going to be purely perfunctory teaching

I certainly got a real kick when I heard of how he was flying with Byrd up in the arctic and crawled forward against a below-zero gale to unscrew a cap on the oil tank. You may remember that the instrument showed the pressure in the oil tank was too high. They were flying over rough ice. To land would have meant instant death. To keep on flying was risking every moment the explosion of the oil tank, which also would have meant instant death.

Bennett crawled out, clinging to the icy surface with one hand and two legs, and unscrewed the cap. He regained the cockpit in safety and saved Byrd's life as well as his own.

With all the admiration of the world for Commander Byrd, it is only justice to say that Bennett helped to make him. Of course, Byrd helped to make Bennett, too, for it was Byrd who picked Bennett out of his crew of mechanics on board ship in the navy and started him as a pilot.

It was Bennett who piloted Byrd's plane on the MacMillan expedition. It was Bennett who flew Byrd's machine over the north pole. It was Bennett who would have flown Byrd's plane over the south pole if he had lived.

I am not underestimating Commander Byrd nor do I desire to take the slightest bit of credit away from him. He had that indispensable quality of genius, the ability to pick good men. He certainly picked a good one in Bennett. He picked another good one in Bernt Balchen, who made the flight to rescue the Bremen fliers with Bennett. In further justice to Byrd, I want to say that all his men, and Bennett in particular, admired him extravagantly and were intensely loyal to him.

Bennett never pushed himself. As a boy up in Warrensburg, in Warren county, New York, where he was born, he became interested in automobiles, and particularly in automobile engines. His thoroughness was demonstrated even then. Instead of being satisfied with finding out what he could do in the garage where he got his first job, he went to an automobile school. It was not long before he owned a garage and embarked on a business career which might have led to prosperity.

The war came, however, and in 1917 he enlisted in the navy. Because of his experience he was assigned to naval aviation, where he remained as a mechanic until nearly two years after the war was over.

His apparently slow progress was due, I think, to the fact that he was a singularly impressive person. He never drew attention to himself in any way. He didn't make mistakes, and he never had to defend himself to his officers. He did not seem to try to attract attention in a favorable way. All the time he was learning more and more about airplanes, but had it not been for Byrd he perhaps would have continued merely a good airplane mechanic and unknown pilot.

That is where Byrd's genius demonstrated itself. Byrd recognized the intelligence and ability of this mechanic who was working under him. And in 1920, as a result largely of Byrd's interest, Bennett learned to fly.

When this quiet but pleasant man came over to Bolling Field I must confess to a slight feeling of curiosity and perhaps a slight prejudice against him. It seemed a curious thing to me that the navy had picked a man for this terribly important flight which might make history not only for aviation, but for geography as well, who had never flown a land plane. It seemed to me that there were plenty of men familiar with both land and sea planes.

So I was in a "show-me" frame of mind when Bennett walked into my office, and my skepticism was increased by his appearance and attitude. I got the impression then that he was suffering from an inferiority complex, and, much as my views about him were changed in other respects, this one never left.

By Lieut. Lester J. Maitland

Hero of the Army Flight to Hawaii

Before we had been in the air five minutes, however, I knew that Byrd and the navy had picked an ideal man for the job. I never had to touch my dual controls. He always knew what to do. In the days that followed he flew in every type of machine we had, ranging from the big Martin bombers with 800 horsepower down to the tiny Sperry messengers with only sixty horsepower. He flew one type as well as the other.

While he scarcely spoke except when spoken to, he emanated reliability, and after the first few instructions as to the difference of land machines from those to which he was accustomed he needed no further aid from me.

There are a good many aviators whose great number of hours in the air mean very little. In the game we speak of them merely as "covering miles." After they have learned straight flying—how to take off and how to land—they stop learning. The rest of their flying is more or less perfunctory. Bennett was not that type of flier. He was learning all the time and getting better and better.

Of course, it is the spectacular things such as his crawling out to fix that oil tank, that grip the imagination. But it was the keen judgment as to what to do in less dramatic but just as important emergencies, combined with his natural flying ability, which made him one of the best pilots with whom it has been my fortune to come in contact. His knowledge of what to do in every emergency was due to his long training and expertness as a mechanic and to his constant study of the airplane from a mechanical standpoint, which made him appreciate every latent and potential weakness.

Bennett had always seemed to me frail. The last time I saw him was at the Poor Richard club dinner in Philadelphia in January. He still looked ill, apparently never having recovered thoroughly from his serious accident on the America. He told me that he felt much better and that he was keen about the prospects for his flight to the south pole with Byrd, though as usual I had to drag all his statements from him.

After the MacMillan expedition, which was a little disappointing, but which so abundantly justified Byrd's original suggestion of Bennett, the Geographical Society sent Bennett on a flight around the United States. I have often wondered how a man who hated so much to talk could have delivered the lectures he gave on that tour.

He was cited by the navy department for his work on the MacMillan expedition, but when he returned from the north pole trip he was awarded both the Distinguished Service Medal and the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Early this year Bernt Balchen told me of how he and Bennett hoped to go to Canada or northern New York and get some practice with the various types of skis. They were not sure whether wooden or metal skis would be the best for the antarctic expedition. And with the careful and detailed preparation which is characteristic of all of Byrd's expeditions, they were to determine by actually experimenting which type was best for the forthcoming south pole flight.

Balchen was not quite sure whether Bennett would be well enough to do this rigorous work. And I wonder if Bennett really was?

In my mind it was his indomitable will, so characteristic of the man, forcing himself to do things so he would be a real aid to Byrd instead of a possible handicap. It was this spirit which was demonstrated on his last and fatal flight when, disregarding the advice of doctors who had ordered him to bed, he went to aid the gallant crew of the Bremen.

It is the hope of the real knights of the air to die with their boots on, to borrow an old expression. A man who really flies cannot be conceited. He realizes how very unimportant he is when he flies over cities, mountains and oceans. Looking down from great heights people appear as ants and he appreciates his own insignificance and he realizes that whether he lives a few years longer or not will make very little difference in the progress of civilization. A man like Bennett, who has accomplished so much more than his fellow men, knowing that he has made history, dies with a sense of having fulfilled his mission in life.

He had seen many friends sacrifice their lives advancing the science of aeronautics—many of them absolutely unknown and unsung. He had tasted the fruit of successful achievement and won for himself undying fame.

Characteristic of the man, his last conscious act was a smile at the chief he had twice accompanied to the arctic, and whom he would have accompanied to the antarctic on another history-making expedition had his life been spared another year.

He died gloriously in an effort to aid fellow airmen. His death was as much a sacrifice to the progress of aviation as though he had died in a crash on an experimental flight. The pneumonia which was the immediate cause of his death was fatal because of the injuries to his lungs sustained in the crash of the America. Never strong physically, he was unable to recuperate from that injury and the pneumonia germ found his weakened lung as easy prey.

Perishable Goods

Tester and Bell was washing his face in a little rill.

They seemed very glad to see me and most eager to hear my news.

I told my tale.

When I had finished Mansel put a hand on my arm.

"William," he said, "she will thank you. I haven't got the words. But please don't count it bad luck that you were shut out. If you had gone in, you'd have made a fatal mistake. Alone, unarmed and with no idea of the building, you wouldn't have stood an earthly chance; and what would have been far worse, we shouldn't have known where you were."

"But—"

"There is no 'but' here," said Mansel. "You've played and you've won your game; but, if you'd gone on, you'd have thrown the rubber away. Do please remember that battles have gone wrong, wars have been lost and the history of the world has been changed, because valor has outrun discretion and men have lost touch."

It was easy enough to see the force of his words, and I have often thought since that the ways of providence are strange indeed, for if Casemate had not turned back, I should not have hung in the oak, and if the castle door had not been cut asunder, I am sure that I should not have lived to tell this tale.

Then Mansel told me that Bell had seen Rose Noble go by and had followed him down; that George and Bell had both seen me on the roof of the car, and while George had pushed on to the crossroads Bell had raced back to meet Mansel and bring up the cars.

"And now," he said, "to breakfast. I picked up some food at Lass. And you'll be glad of a wash. And as soon as ever we've done I want you to show us around."

While we were eating we decided that Mansel and George and I should go out on foot, that one servant should watch the crossroads and the others stay with the cars until we returned. If one of the enemy passed, he was not to be stopped or followed, but only marked—"for," said Mansel, "Mr. Chandas has done the trick, and we don't want to start a new hare till we know where we are. Of course, if Rose Noble comes by, you will shoot him at sight. But, unless I'm much mistaken, he won't come out any more."

With that he told Carson and Bell to serve out a pistol apiece, and when this was done he and George and I set out for the wood.

As we went I asked what was the book which I had found them reading when I came in.

George pulled it out of his pocket and held it up.

"Souvenir," he said. "When I gave the bookseller his money and borrowed his plumes he pressed this into my hand. He had a speech ready, I fear, but, beyond that he was the author, I have no idea what he said. While I was waiting at the crossroads I looked to see what it was. It's a guide in English to Lass and the neighborhood. The grammar's unequal, but if I could write half as good a guide in German I should be more than pleased. And it's got a good plan of Lass and a couple of maps."

We said no more at the time, for we were approaching the wood.

This, we afterward found, was nearly a mile across by some half a mile in depth. The drive which led to the spur went to the heart of the thicket, and there turned sharp to the left; from there it ran slightly uphill to the edge of the wood and then directly down to the castle gate. It follows that, from any one walking, the spur and the castle were hidden till he came to the edge of the wood, but then burst upon him in an instant, as though some curtain had suddenly been let fall.

Before we breasted the rise, for caution's sake we had stepped in among the trees, and when I had parted the branches and Mansel and George had come up, I heard the one catch his breath, while the other stood staring like a zany upon the remarkable scene.

Presently we moved to a knoll and lay down behind its swell.

The spur was empty and the castle walls bare as I had left them; only the smoke I had noticed gave any sign of life.

"Where's that guide?" said Mansel, suddenly. "See if it mentions this place."

Hanbury had the book in an instant and was studying one of its maps.

"Gath," he said, after a moment. "This should be the Castle of Gath."

When Justice Triumphed

the foot. The gunmen retreated to a small guardhouse which is built into the south wall of the Tombs.

Berg at this point decided that the game was up. He raised his pistol to his temple, but Amberg stopped him, shaking his head as much as to say they still had a chance.

But the chances were growing slimmer by the second. Though the guardhouse sheltered them for the time being from the steady hail of lead the police were pumping into the yard, it could be only a matter of moments now. So Berg raised his pistol again.

The spectators looked down on him as he clicked his heels together and stood at attention. He pointed the gun at his temple and pulled the trigger.

No report. The onlookers saw him snap the weapon again. He examined the barrel, made some adjustment, and for the third time pulled the trigger. This time it worked. Berg pitched over backward in a half somersault.

Mike and Hymie, however, were not quite ready yet to quit the fight. Indeed, while Berg staged his little act they had been busily loading and firing from their retreat. The business settled down for the time being to a seige. They were sheltered from the police, and the police were sheltered from them. Along the west side of the Tombs building Patrolman Flannery and others held the trio at bay.

Presently Amberg darted out of the guardhouse and pulled Berg's pistol out of the dead man's hand. As he did so a bullet hit him in the right hand. The bullet came from an unexpected quarter, the eighth floor of the Conklin building, which previously had held only spectators. A traffic policeman had taken a position at one of the windows.

McKenna and his slim companion began shooting back at the officer.

Now detectives arrived on the eighth floor of this building with riot guns—a sort of machine gun which fires twenty shots at one pull of the trigger. The first roar out of this weapon sent some sixty women workers, and not a few men, into a complete panic. The report spread that friends of the trapped prisoners

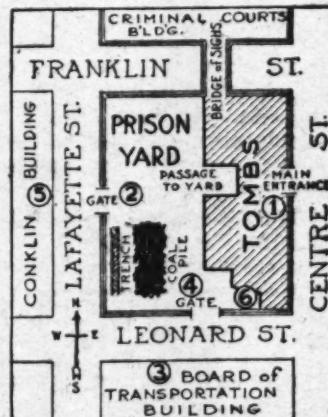

Diagram above shows battle-ground at Tombs. After killing Warden Mallon at (1) mutineers ran into prison yard, shot two keepers, one fatally, at (2) and then tried to rush gate, but were driven back by fire from Tombs. had taken possession of the building. Many women fainted.

The One Way Out.

Next came Johnny Broderick, the New York police department's own pet wildcat. Broderick, head of the industrial squad, is habitually impatient with gunmen. He is never one for dilly-dallying. On this occasion he boldly strode toward the south gate inside the yard, determined to shoot it out with Mike and Hymie at close quarters.

But by now the two had revised the manner of their escape.

The prisoners had all but exhausted their ammunition and the hail of lead pouring into the southeast corner of the yard had steadily increased. The battle had lasted about ten minutes. Keeper Murphy was dead. Warden Mallon was dying. Outside the walls a small army of police formed a cordon around the block. Hymie and Mike decided it was time to follow the way out that Berg had taken.

As Broderick entered the yard the spectators saw Amberg place his pistol against his head and pull the trigger. He fell backward and McKenna caught him and shoved the body out of the guardhouse. Then Mike set himself to meet the advancing Broderick. He fired and Broderick returned the fire. McKenna staggered, then lifted his gun to his temple.

The battle was over.

Broderick, however, wasn't so sure of that. He proceeded cautiously about the yard. As he was doing this, a head appeared out of a trench along the west side of the prison yard. Broderick fired a shot and the head ducked down out of sight. Then a shovel appeared, waving in the air.

"Don't shoot me!" came a voice from the trench. My name is Thomas Kelley, and I'm an electrician!"

The man had been there through the fight! He had been digging the trench. One of the fusillade of bullets had cut off a shoe lace. He had played dead while the siege was on.

The question of how the prisoners had obtained their guns puzzled the police exceedingly. Various members of the Tombs official staff were quizzed. Slack conditions at the Tombs were severely criticized. But the chief blame fell, not upon any of the men inside, but upon one of the gunmen's own kin.

Robert Weiner, one of the Amberg mob, was arrested immediately after the attempted break. He admitted he had thrown guns over the wall some days before, and that he had waited outside in a swift roadster for Hymie and his fellow killers. Later he repudiated his confession, but was convicted of murder. He is now in the death house at Sing Sing.

As for the rest of the McKinna group—

Powers, a criminal since the age of 13; William Reichel, arrested later, and James Nannery, captured just recently, all received life terms for their part in the Reid holdup and murder. With the sentencing of Nannery the police announced that the last of the McKinna gang was in the hands of justice.

CHINOOK THE OLD TRAPPERS' LANGUAGE By EL COMANCIO

Cut this out and save it. With other lessons, appearing each week in this page, you will soon have the complete Chinook vocabulary.)

KIN ZGHORZGH MAN — This means an Englishman, and the word, of course, is derived from the fact that the English were ruled by King George when the Indians first met them.

KISHKISH—Pronounce as spelled. This word means To Drive Away, but was never widely used and is now about obsolete.

KUITAN — Pronounce CUE-WIT-TAN. This means Horse in Chinook and nothing else.

KLAHANIE—The A is pronounced as in Father in both syllables, with the accent on the first, and the final IE has the sound of the Y in fly. This means Outside, Exterior, or Outer Surface, but is used so little that the Chinook talker might not hear it once a year. MAHSH, which means Throw Away or Throw Outside, is now used mostly to express the idea formerly covered by KLAHANIE.

KLAHOWYUM — Pronounce KLAH-HOW-YUM, with the accent on the second syllable. This is the Chinook word to express a state of feeling. Sometimes it is used alone as a greeting, in which case it stands for "How are you feeling?" NIKA DELATE KLAHOWYUM is "I am feeling fine."

KLAHWA—Formerly this word meant Slow or Go Slowly, but toward the end of the period when Chinook was an active language it was little used. WAKE HYAK (not fast) was employed to express the same idea.

KLAH—This is pronounced as written, and is Chinook for Away From, Off Of, Take Off, Put Away, etc.

RIDDLE SUPPLY ALMOST SEEMS TO BE ENDLESS

There seems to be an endless supply of riddles in the world. Here are some that perhaps you have never heard before.

1. Ten men's strength and ten men's length, and ten men cannot set it on end, yet one can carry it. What is it?—Homer Brown.

2. What contains more feet in summer than in winter?—Mary Sawyer.

3. What letter of the Dutch alphabet names an English lady of title?—Wilbert Kehe.

4. Who makes one out of two without subtracting?—Orville J. Pettijohn.

5. Why is charity like an umbrella?—Marie Lobst.

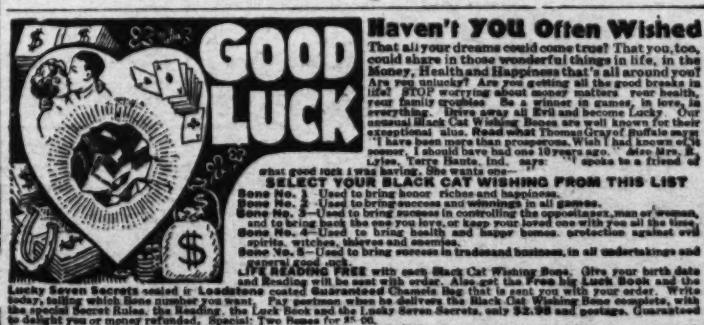

Editorial

SAVE THE BLOSSOMS.

This is the time of year when the wild flowers are blooming, and probably you will be making excursions into the woods in search of your favorite blossoms.

The flowers and trees and grass were made for our enjoyment, but not for our abuse. The careless person who pulls a plant up by the roots or strips branches from a tree is spoiling the pleasure of others. It is simple cowardice to mistreat a plant, which cannot defend itself.

The boy or girl who wants his own rights respected will respect the rights of others—and also the rights of inanimate things like flowers and trees. There is no real pleasure in being a vandal. Gather flowers and blossoms for your enjoyment, but always remember that thoughtfulness is the watchword of the "real fellow" and the "real girl."

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 78—The Power of Rome Declines.

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FOR SIX CENTURIES ROME REIGNED AS MISTRESS OF THE WORLD. HAVING CONQUERED THE CIVILIZED NATIONS AND UNITED THEM IN ONE GREAT EMPIRE, SHE SOUGHT TO BRING ALL THE BARBARIAN PEOPLES UNDER HER YOKE. HER MAILED LEGIONS WERE INVINCIBLE FOR MANY, MANY YEARS.

AS TIME PASSED, CONSTANT WARS SAPPED THE STRENGTH OF ROME. THE MAINTENANCE OF GREAT ARMIES EXHAUSTED HER RESOURCES. THE OLD FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THE ROMANS WAS DYING. THE SHATTERED RANKS OF THE LEGIONS HAD TO BE FILLED WITH FOREIGN CONSCRIPTS.

THEN THE TABLES WERE TURNED. THE BARBARIANS BECAME THE AGGRESSORS, AND THE ROMANS FOUND IT INCREASINGLY DIFFICULT TO DEFEND THEIR EXTENSIVE BORDERS. SOMETIMES BARBARIAN HOSTS CROSSED THE FRONTIERS.

THE DIVISIONS OF THE EMPIRE AND THEIR EMPERORS.
 ① DIOCLETIAN. ② MAXIMIAN.
 ③ C. LERIUS. ④ CONSTANTIUS.

"Take That, You Villain!"

The Conquerors Club Takes Up Drama and Baseball

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS.

Red Hopkins, one of the four members of the Conquerors' club, is playing center field on the Ferriston High school baseball team. In the first game of the season he fails to slide into a base and is reprimanded by Coach Edwards. Nobody understands this apparent cowardice, but Bob Miller, Bill Jenkins and Porky Jones, the other Conquerors, retain their faith in Red. Bob is one of the pitchers on the team, but Bill and Porky are not out for baseball. Bill is playing the lead in the sophomore class play opposite Ruth Sand. Ruth is playing the title role in the second game of the season. Red again fails to slide, this time at a critical moment while Bob is pitching, and he is accused of being yellow. Coach Edwards reluctantly retires him to the role of a substitute, and Red seeks consolation by throwing himself heart and soul into practice for the class play. In the big scene where Bill shoots him and he falls to the floor their action is so ragged that they must practice continually in order to get it just right. Finally, on the night preceding the big ball game of the year with Fayette, the class play is to be put on.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT IV.

The school auditorium was packed with students, parents and townspeople, and the members of the east ply got to fall just when the revolver goes off. But I think after all the practicing we did, Bill, I'll do it from force of habit."

Suddenly there were insistent demands for silence, and the curtain rose. The play began smoothly, and soon the audience was laughing excitedly over it.

The scene of the shooting came shortly after the beginning of the third act. The play was moving at high speed. Red, intent on his evil purpose of kidnapping Ruth had bound and gagged her, and was now

Bill, the hero, entered. At once Red jumped to his feet and ran across the stage to escape. Drawing his revolver, Bill cried "Take that, you villain!" and fired. Red, the moment the revolver shot was heard, fell to the floor, and the audience clapped enthusiastically. The villain was dead and the scene was a great success.

After the actors had received hearty congratulations of their friends, Bob, who had watched the they had him a hearty goodnight, giving him a final word of congratulation on his fine playing of the villain's part in the play. As they walked on, Porky shook his head soberly.

"I can't understand it," he said, wonderingly. "It's not possible that Red's yellow, and yet the fact remains that he deliberately flunked when it came to sliding into those bases."

"It's too bad," said Bob. "I've tried to get him to talk to me about it, but he's so darn sensitive he won't say a word, except that he's afraid to slide. That's not like Red."

"Well, if it weren't for his football and basketball record he'd certainly have a black eye in this school," said Porky in a worried voice. "As it is, there are lots of fellows who say things I don't like."

"I know it," agreed Bob. "But they don't say them in front of us Conquerors, and they'd better not if they want to retain their health. Red's our pal and we'll stick up for him, no matter what happens."

"We sure will," agreed Porky heartily, and they parted for the night.

Bill was taking Ruth to the Fayette game the next afternoon, and they arrived early enough to get seats in the front row of the stand directly behind home plate. They saw Porky on the field, and motioned him up to their side.

As the trio sat down to watch the batting practice, something thumped against the bench. Bill reached into his coat pocket and drew forth a revolver.

"Well, what do you know about that?" he exclaimed with annoyance. "I thought this side of my coat seemed heavy. Look, I'm still carrying the gun. I used to kill Red in the play last night. There's still a blank in it, too."

Porky immediately wanted to fire it, but Bill restrained him, and shoved the gun back into his coat pocket, and they turned to watch practice.

The Fayette team looked strong in their fielding workout, and at batting practice they hit them far and often. Both Bob and Ed Sand warmed up for Ferriston, but when Fayette went to bat to open the game, Ed was in the pitcher's box, as everybody expected.

Just before the game started Porky pointed out Red, who was sitting on the Ferriston bench in uniform.

"Bill," he said, "don't tell me that any fellow who was yellow would stick out for practice after what's happened to Red."

"I should say not," agreed Bill. "Red's all right, all the way through."

They turned their attention to the field. The first man up for Fayette was a tall, rangy youth with powerful shoulders. Ed Sand wound up and shot a high curve over the plate. The batter stepped forward, took a long, powerful swing, and connected squarely with the ball. A groan went up from the stands as the ball sailed far over the center fielder's head and the batter trotted leisurely around the sacks for a home run.

Having your first offering knocked for a home run is enough to take the heart out of any pitcher, but Ed Sand was courageous. He faced the next batter with grim face and pitched to him carefully. The man was out at first on a grounder that the Ferriston shortstop gathered in. However, the third and fourth Fayette batters got to Sand for singles, one man getting to third on the second hit. When the next player lifted a long fly to the outfield this runner scored on the return throw. The third out was made on an infield

How to Play the Outfield

BY JOHNNY MOSTIL.

JOHNNY MOSTIL

The outfielder isn't so busy as the pitcher, catcher or first baseman but his function in the field requires alertness and ability when his turn comes.

And in this day of heavy hitting, with sluggers driving out long flies, the outfielder has to be particularly active and know his batters like a book.

First of all, I will mention the requirements which go to make a good outfielder: A strong throwing arm, ability to judge balls and distance; and to look "into the sun," speed on his feet, and skill in studying the opposition batters. In addition, the outfielders is usually expected to be a heavy hitter and almost all outfielders in the big leagues today bat .300 or better.

If you desire to play the outfield, and think you qualify in the above particulars, select your field with care. You may be required to move over to another lot but it is best to stick to the position once secured if possible.

The modern outfielder carefully studies each batter's peculiarities, as to what field he usually hits, and whether he is a long fly knocker or given to Texas leaguers. There are several types of batters familiar to us all:

While the average right-handed batter will "pull them" over towards left and the left-handed batter towards right field, many batter are inclined to place hits when they get pitched balls to their liking and a fielder usually tries to play for each individual batter.

How About Signals.

Many ball clubs have a series of signals, relayed through an infielder, so that the outfielder may know what the pitch will be and play accordingly. There is danger in the other team learning these signals and besides, it's rather complicated for teams not playing together every day.

An outfielder needs lots of practice so that he may learn to judge just where a ball can be fielded: in other words, so that he can estimate quickly where the fly or the line drive will land. The outfielder, too, must back up the infielders wherever possible so that if the ball gets through the first defense he can quickly retrieve it.

In returning the ball, after a catch or a stop, the outfielder has to bear in mind the runners on bases and the number out. When the runner occupies first base, the ball should always be returned via second. When second has a runner on, get it over to the third baseman quickly.

The throw to home is a thriller and roller, but Fayette had a lead of two runs before the home team came to bat.

(To Be Concluded Next Week.)

is difficult. The outfielder doesn't have much time and his peg must be strong and accurate. In throwing to the plate the ball must go low so as to allow the third baseman to cut off the ball if necessary, to head off the runner going from first to second. This applies to the heave from left. The long, swift throw straight to the catcher's mitt in time to get the fleet runner coming in to score is a hard thing to master, and a fielder may well practice it.

The outfielder often takes desperate chances, like running up against a wall or bleacher to catch a long fly. He must cover the ground and always keep his eye on the ball. And it's a pretty safe bet, if Babe Ruth comes up swinging his big bat, and you know he is going to be pitched to, to drop way back and pray for good luck!
